Loyola Alumni — Making It All Possible

Kayo Manson-Tompkins '81 has been writing Loyola a check for the same amount every month since 1998. Burton Rosky '57 has sent Loyola an annual offering every winter since 1974. Michael Leventhal '67 has made a donation on about the same day each year since 1976. This steady stream has added up—the trio has contributed $23,000 to the school so far.

Orphaned at age 11, Manson-Tompkins's Social Security benefits were depleted by the time she finished her undergraduate degree. "Loyola gave me a scholarship all three years and I always wanted to give back." She did, despite financial pressures faced after her husband died and she cared for her two young sons on her own. She decided to keep her donations conservative but consistent, and began to send the School the same amount each month. A former secretary of the Black Law Student Association, she earmarks her checks for the African American Scholarship Fund. Manson-Tompkins has not missed a check in nearly eight years. "I don't have an automated system," she said. "I physically write the checks out—this is a conscious effort."

For the last 30 years, Rosky annually earmarked a donation to the Law School Juris Fund: "You continue to be there for the School and help students who couldn't afford to attend otherwise. When I went to law school in 1949, it wasn't that expensive. Now, how many people can afford it without help?" In addition to contributing financially, Rosky also gave back by serving on the Law School's Board of Governors.

Leventhal operated his own business law practice for most of his career, and he thanks Loyola for his ability to make gifts to the School. "Attending Loyola was a path to making a decent living," Leventhal said. He was working in the import-export business when, he said, "I got tired of working for other people." So, he attended Loyola at night and founded the Loyola Brief, a precursor to the Law Review. As an alumnus, Leventhal has been a major contributor to the J. Rex Dibble Scholarship and is a member of the Dean's Forum, in recognition of his giving.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

"I am deeply grateful for your generosity—it aided me tremendously in achieving a first-rate legal education. Without your help, law school would have been a remote possibility. Your generosity is proof that miracles do happen."

Jesse Espinoza '07
Acosta Scholarship Recipient

"One of the leading factors that kept me at Loyola was the support that Loyola alumni give one another. Thank you once again for the continuous support."

Jonathan Feldman '07
Sayre Macneil Scholarship and McNicholas & McNicholas Trial Advocacy Scholarship Recipient

"I could not have pursued my goals without your extraordinary generosity. In addition to attending classes, I am on the Loyola of Los Angeles Law Review staff and I am participating in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program, which provides free assistance to low-income taxpayers."

Jennifer Gibson '07
Fritz B. Burns Memorial Scholarship Recipient

"The Dean's Scholarship limited my debt and let me consider career opportunities that would not have been sound options otherwise. The support lifts some of the financial worry from my shoulders and allows me to focus on my legal studies."
