To all our graduates and friends:

This is a very exciting time for Loyola Law School. Our graduates are achieving outstanding success in practice, in obtaining prestigious judicial clerkships and on the Bar Examination; our full-time faculty, now numbering over 50, is increasingly prominent in the world of legal scholarship while maintaining Loyola's tradition of excellence in teaching, and, once again you, our alumni and friends, have increased your participation and generosity for which I and the entire Law School community are deeply grateful.

The number of donors supporting the Advocates, the alumni annual fund drive, has grown from 522 in 1985 to 817 in 1989, a significant increase. The goal for the 1989-90 Advocates Campaign is 1,000 alumni donors.

Construction has begun on the Father Charles S. Casassa Building which will add much-needed classroom, trial advocacy and legal skills facilities, student offices, an expanded bookstore, and, most importantly, a much-needed library expansion in the Hugh and Hazel Darling Pavilion.

With all of these advances, student scholarships remain the most critical element in assuring that Loyola will continue its historic mission of service to the community and opportunity to the talented and deserving to gain a quality legal education.

This year our total scholarships exceeded $1.2 million. Our first-year class received more than $440,000 in scholarships, much of which was awarded to members of under-represented minority groups. In all, some entering 42 students received major awards. Still, four out of five of our students including many who are highly deserving both in terms of their personal and intellectual quality as well as their financial need receive no scholarship assistance while at Loyola — and will graduate heavily burdened with debt.

Each year, we lose several outstanding candidates and transfers because we cannot provide them with appropriate aid. Although our endowment has grown from $240,000 to $10,000,000 over the last decade, we are most dependent on two sources of funds: your annual contribution and tuition. Obviously, heavy reliance on tuition for scholarships places an additional burden on all of our students, very few of whom, whether full of part-time, are so solvent that tuition payments are not a concern. As a matter of fact, according to A.B.A. statistics, per capita, Loyola Law School students are more heavily burdened with law school loan debt than almost all of their peers throughout the nation.

I earnestly ask each one of you to share the fruits of your professional success with this generation of Loyola students. You can help us provide the critical support needed. In this, my last year as dean, I can say with pride that we have an outstanding law school.

Please join us with your contributions to help make it a great one.

Sincerely,

Arthur N. Frakt
Dean

The Advocates Campaign

The Advocates Campaign is the alumni annual giving program for Loyola Law School. Chairman of the Advocates, Roxanne Christ '85 led the effort to recruit more alumni donors than ever before. Over 815 donors supported the Advocates and alumni raised $180,000 to benefit law school programs. The graph below illustrates current and future growth in the number of alumni participating in the annual giving program.
