VICTOR GOLD NAMED LOYOLA LAW INTERIM DEAN

Professor Victor Gold was named interim dean of Loyola Law School and senior vice president of Loyola Marymount University. In January, he replaced David W. Burcham, who became executive vice president and provost of Loyola Marymount University. A national search for a permanent dean is underway.

Gold, a William M. Rains Fellow, served as associate dean for academic affairs from 2000-2005, during which time he focused on developing Loyola’s national reputation, recruiting top-notch professors and emphasizing faculty research. Gold joined Loyola in 1996—he is a well-regarded scholar who has authored dozens of law review articles and a superb teacher who won the 2007 Excellence in Teaching Award.

As interim dean, Gold looks forward to spending more time with what he considers to be Loyola’s greatest asset—its students, alumni, faculty and staff. “I look forward to being more closely connected to our amazing network of alumni, some of whom once sat in my class. As an academic, you are locked away preparing for classes or researching and writing—it can become rather cold and isolated. As a dean, you are out in the real world dealing with people.”

Prior to Loyola, Gold was a law professor at Arizona State University and an associate at Nossaman, Krueger & Marsh. He graduated Order of the Coif from UCLA Law School, where he was an editor of the UCLA Law Review. Gold entered the dean’s office with an endorsement from his previous occupant, David Burcham. “Professor Gold is an extremely capable leader who cares deeply about the law school. He will continue to enhance the academic excellence of UCLA.”
