ANGELENOS TRUST POLICE MORE THAN ANY OTHER INSTITUTION, LMU SURVEY FINDS

Some 25 years after Los Angeles smoldered during massive civil unrest, sparked by a widespread belief that the city's police were biased and unaccountable, Angelenos trust the LAPD more than any other local institution, according to a survey conducted by Loyola Marymount University researchers.

But a troubling racial gap remains, as white and Asian American residents are far more likely to view the Los Angeles Police Department through a positive lens, while African Americans in Los Angeles perceive the police in negative terms.

The findings represent a ray of hope for the Los Angeles Police Department, a force often troubled in the past by poor relationships with the communities it patrols. The 1992 riots and unrest broke out after four officers captured on video beating African American suspect Rodney King were acquitted of brutality charges in a Simi Valley courtroom.

"While the LAPD has had its share of serious issues, the one constant over the last two decades has been efforts by its leadership to mend fences and build relationships with the people of Los Angeles, especially minority communities," said Fernando Guerra, professor of political science and Chicana/o Studies and director of the center. "Our survey shows the effort has not been wasted, but that more work must still be done."

The results come from a survey conducted by the Thomas and Dorothy Leavey Center for the Study of Los Angeles at LMU. The center has surveyed residents every five years since the riots, creating a longitudinal portrait of how the city and region's attitudes have changed. The full report will be released on Wednesday.

This year, respondents were asked if several institutions could be trusted "to do what is right." Among the choices were the federal government, state government, city government, LAPD, Department of Water and Power, the news media, Los Angeles Unified School District, labor unions, religious institutions, or their neighbors.

Among official groups, the LAPD rated highest, with 58 percent saying the police would do the right thing "just about always" or "most of the time." The only category ranked higher was the amorphous "your neighbors."

The major gap in perception occurs between races. Among white respondents, 69 percent said the LAPD would do the right thing, and 68 percent of Asian Americans agreed. But for African Americans surveyed, just 39 percent agreed. Latinos were in the middle, at 54 percent.

"In one sense, the data tell us something we already knew in Los Angeles: that even after years of outreach and building bridges, different ethnic groups have widely varying relationships with the police," said Brianne Gilbert, associate director of the center.

Also troubling, in an era of fake news and rampant presidential falsehoods, the news industry was the least trusted by Angelenos. Nearly one-fifth (19 percent) of respondents said "the media" does what is right "none of the time."

The survey was conducted by telephone and online in January and February, among 1,200 Los Angeles city residents. The margin of error is +/- 3.0 percent.

2017 PUBLIC OPINION SURVEY METHODOLOGY

As part of Forecast LA's unique approach to forecasting in the Los Angeles region, the Center for the Study of Los Angeles conducted an outlook survey. The Los Angeles Public Opinion Survey involved 20-minute telephone sessions and online surveys with more than 2,400 adults (1,800 phone and 600 online) living in Los Angeles County. Survey respondents were asked about quality-of-life perceptions, personal economic wellbeing, economic concerns, overall life satisfaction, and various civic issues.

Los Angeles Public Opinion Survey Sampling Since the primary purpose of this study was to gather representative input from adult residents within the Los Angeles region, an initial random digit dial (RDD) sample was employed. The RDD sample was drawn by determining the active phone exchanges (the first three numbers of a seven-digit phone number) and blocks with a given sampling area (in this case, by the zip codes that comprise the county). A random list of all active residential and cell phone numbers in the area was produced. This method included both listed and unlisted phone numbers. Listed samples were used to meet particular quotas for racial/ethnic categories and geographic location.

The online portion was comprised of responses from double opt-in respondents who have agreed to participate in surveys. Real-time sampling and survey publishing services were also used to target respondents outside of the initial reach. Finally, listed samples were used to fill gaps within racial/ethnic and geographic quotas. For all methods, adult respondents in LA County were targeted and then randomly selected within their group.

SCREENERS

The protocol for this study involved asking potential respondents a series of questions, referred to as screeners, which were used to ensure that the person lived within the county and was at least 18 years old. The target sample size was 1,200 residents from the city of Los Angeles and 1,200 residents from Los Angeles County who live outside the city of LA. The first quota was a random digit dialing of approximately 750 residents (with 66% cell phone). The online survey ran concurrently with a target sample size of 600 respondents. The remaining racial/ethnic and geographic quotas were determined based on the fallout: 400 African American residents, 600 Asian residents, 400 residents from the San Fernando Valley (only within the city of Los Angeles) and 400 residents from the San Gabriel Valley. Given the demographic proportion of Latino and white residents in the region, as expected, both groups naturally fell out from the initial wave of online and phone respondents.

DATA COLLECTION

Telephone surveys were conducted the first four full weeks in January 2017 and first two weeks in February between the hours of 4:30pm and 9pm during the week, 10am to 4pm on Saturday, and 10am to 5pm on Sunday. The survey was translated into Spanish, Mandarin, and Korean. Translators who spoke Spanish, Mandarin, and Korean were available to conduct interviews for residents who only spoke, or were more comfortable speaking any of those languages. The online survey ran from January 13 to January 26 and was available in English and Spanish.

The margin of error is  $\pm 3.0\%$  for the entire sample of 2,404 residents.
