Building Program — Phase III

Library and Moot Court Renovation Begins

The metamorphosis of Loyola Law School is nearing its final stage. Phase III is being placed on the "fast track" and the estimated $2 million project is anticipated to be completed in early 1985. Phase III is concerned with the renovation of the 9th Street Building, which opened in 1964.

Impetus for this project was a generous gift by Mrs. Liliore G. Rains in honor of her late husband, William M. Rains a Loyola Law School graduate

$1,500,000 GRANT

Chair in Real Property Honors Burns

The Fritz B. Burns Foundation announced the $1,500,000 endowment of the Fritz B. Burns Professorial Chair of Real Property.

In making the announcement, foundation President Joseph E. Rawlinson '58 said, "the officers and directors are thrilled to be able to respond to your, [Loyola Law School's], proposal in this matter."

Acknowledging, with thanks, the gift, Dean Arthur Frakt stated, "it is through the Burns Foundation's generosity and foresight that Loyola Law School has been able to continue its leadership role in legal education. The founding of the Fritz B. Burns Professorial Chair of Real Property is a strong incentive and challenge for the administration, faculty and student body to continue to strive to meet the standards of excellence and achievement Mr. Burns set during his lifetime and which the foundation is so loyally carrying forward."

and also open the possibility of an Annual Land Use — Property Institute.

During his life Mr. Burns distinguished himself as a real estate developer and was renowned for his philanthropic works, among them Loyola Law School. He served as

Into the 80's — Overgoal

As of March, 1984 Loyola Law School's Into the 80's Program surpassed its $8 million goal.

The combined total of Building and Endowment gifts is $9,028,761. Of this amount $5,921,711 is for bricks and mortar and the $3,107,050 balance is earmarked for endowment which includes student scholarships and faculty support.

All segments of the Loyola family — alumni, faculty, students and administration, share the success of this.

St. Thomas Award to Van de Kamp

John K. Van de Kamp, Attorney General of California, received the 1984 St. Thomas More Medallion from Loyola Law School's honor society at a Biltmore Hotel luncheon, Sunday, April 1.

The St. Thomas More Medallion commemorates the 16th Century English scholar and lawyer, esteemed for his personal and professional dedication to his family, church, and country. Named a Lord Chancellor, he was later canonized by the Roman Catholic Church.

John K. Van de Kamp is a 23-year veteran of the criminal justice system. The 47-year-old Van de Kamp was District Attorney of Los Angeles County for seven years before being elected state Attorney General in 1982. Appointed District Attorney by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors in 1975, Van de Kamp was elected District Attorney in 1976 and reelected in 1980.

As California's Attorney General, Van de Kamp is the state's chief law enforcement officer. He directs a staff of nearly 3,000 employees in the State Department of Justice.

A chair, honoring the late Fritz B. Burns, was first suggested by Dean Frakt, in December, 1983. At that time, in his proposal, Dean Frakt cited the present, strong faculty involvement in the property area. He added that the addition of an appropriate outstanding teacher would permit offering students a full range of courses in property and land use Honorary Co-Chairman of the school's Board of Visitors and helped plan and design, in 1963, the original building when Loyola relocated to its present site. In 1973 Mr. Burns was the recipient of the Law School Distinguished Service Award and an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree.

Allan Ides — New Associate Dean

Professor Allan Ides has been named Associate Dean of Loyola Law School effective July 1 of this year. He will replace Daniel L. Stewart who has served in that capacity since 1981. Professor Stewart will return to full time teaching, beginning with the fall semester.

After receiving undergraduate and graduate degrees from U.C.L.A. and L.M.U. respectively Professor Ides graduated from Loyola Law School in 1979. In law school he was Editor-in-Chief of the Law Review and received virtually every academic honor the school awards.

He was appointed law clerk to the Hon. Clement F. Haynsworth, Chief Judge of the Fourth Circuit of Appeals after graduation. In 1980 Professor Ides established Loyola Law School history when he became clerk to Justice Byron R. White of the United States Supreme Court. The first graduate so honored.

Since returning to Loyola he has become involved with the Law Review, Career Placement and virtually every aspect of the students' education programs. In addition he has established himself as a scholar and teacher and his article on the War Powers Act will be in the next issue of the Loyola Law Review.

NEWS BRIEFS

Justice Broussard Speaker

Graduation — May 27

Loyola Law School will graduate more than 350 students, Sunday, May 27. It will be the school's 63rd commencement and take place on the Loyola Marymount Campus, Westchester.

Allen E. Broussard, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of California, will be the keynote speaker. Justice Broussard has served on the state's highest court since 1981 and was chosen as speaker by a committee made up of students, faculty and administrators.

As customary, the day will begin with a Baccalaureate Mass in Sacred Heart Chapel on the LMU campus and the graduation program will begin at 1 P.M. Included in the program will be 2 student speakers representing the Day and Evening sections and awarding of the prestigious Rev. Richard A. Vachon, S.J. Distinguished Service Medallion.

Following the awarding of degrees a reception for graduates and their guests will be held.

April 13

Art Show Opens

ENVIRONS 3: WASHINGTON BOULEVARD will open Friday, April 13 at the Burns Gallery of Loyola Law School. An opening reception for the artists will be held from 6-8 p.m.

It is the third in Loyola Law School's series of exhibitions highlighting artists whose studios are located in close proximity to its downtown campus and runs until June 8.

Under the direction of Curator and Art Program Director Ellie Blankfort, the school has initiated exhibitions, purchased art works for its permanent collection, and hosted lectures and dialogues with artists. Through a grant from The Times Mirror Corporation, the school has also commissioned murals for its new campus.

This pioneering involvement of a law school in the fine arts is intended, to broaden the educational base of its students, as well as to reach out to its neighbors in the downtown vicinity.

This exhibition identifies an area in mid-city, between La Brea and Arlington on Washington Boulevard, which has attracted a number of artists during the past several years.

"Of the many artists who populate this small area," says Curator Ellie Blankfort, "ten have been selected for the exhibition. Given the Law School's commitment to human values and social justice, it is of special note that these artists address issues of common interest with the school's faculty and students."

Information about ENVIRONS 3: WASHINGTON BOULEVARD can be obtained from Ms. Blankfort at (213) 661-2321.

FACULTY CHANGES

FROM THE DEAN

The Spring is always a time for preparation for a change in the academic world. Students are gearing up for exams, seniors are preparing for graduation and bar examinations and the faculty is contemplating new courses, programs and changes for the following year.

Two of our distinguished faculty members will be retiring this year. Gerry Rosen and Martha Robinson have both played very important roles in the evolution of the law school. They will be missed. There will be greater detail concerning their retirement and future plans in the next issue of the Lawyer. Carol Agate and Gary Wienerman will also be leaving Loyola, after several years of loyal service.

Several new faculty will be joining us next year. Let me tell you a little bit about them. Don Brosnan, a graduate of Yale Law School where he was an editor of the Law Review, has had significant experience in the tax and bankruptcy fields. He is currently an associate at Irell & Manella, one of Los Angeles's outstanding law firms. Don brings tremendous enthusiasm and great intellectual accomplishments and interests to Loyola. He is a fine addition to our tax and business faculty. Even more, he will offer a challenging and provocative perspective in virtually every area of legal scholarship.

Victor Gold, who will be a visiting professor of law for 1984-85, is presently a full professor at Arizona State University School of Law where he has developed an enviable reputation as both teacher and scholar. A former editor of the UCLA Law Review and an associate with the Los Angeles firm of Nossaman, Krueger & Marsh, Victor will specialize in commercial law, legal writing and related courses.

Karl Michael Manheim taught at Loyola Law School from 1975 to 1979. During that time, he developed an enviable reputation as a fine classroom teacher and a serious scholar. After several years with the City Attorney's Office in Santa Monica where he helped break new ground on several significant legal areas, Karl will be returning to full time teaching.

Professor Lary Lawrence of the University of North Carolina will be joining the faculty as a full tenured professor this summer. Lary is currently concluding work on a major treatise with William D. Hawkland, Chancellor of Louisiana State University, who has been considered to be the leading authority on the Uniform Commercial Code. Professor Lawrence brings to Loyola one of America's outstanding teachers and scholars in commercial law and will greatly strengthen our already strong program in that field.

In addition to these new faculty members, Professors Louis Natali and Dan Lazaroff, who have already made significant contributions to our academic program in several areas, will become permanent tenured members of the faculty, and Visiting Professor Edward McGlynn Gaffney, the James P. Bradley Constitutional Law Chairholder, will join us on a long-term basis.

The quality of the faculty is perhaps the most significant ingredient in the excellence of the school's educational program. The additions to our faculty represented by these gifted teachers and scholars will help insure the high level of excellence in teaching, which has been the hallmark of Loyola for years, will be maintained.

Arthur N. Frakt
Dean

Edith Padolsky, acting professor, on behalf of the faculty welcomed campus visitors from Poland's University of Warsaw Law School. Jozef Okolski (L) is Vice Dean of the Faculty and a professor of civil law. Professor Eugeniusz Piontek teaches international law. While at Loyola they discoursed with students and faculty.

SUMMARY

BOARD OF VISITORS MEET

The Board of Visitors is a group of volunteers — alumni and non-alumni — who give advice and counsel to the Dean of Loyola Law School. In the June issue of the Loyola Lawyer a detailed story of its actions and membership will be reported. Following is a summary of the most recent meeting.

Comments to aid the Board of Visitors are solicited and should be mailed to Jack Ostrow, Chairman, care of the Loyola Law School Development Office.

Burt Cohn — Chairman Jack Ostrow '46 opened the meeting with a moment of reflection honoring the memory of Burton R. Cohn '77, recently deceased member of the Visitors.

President's Report — Rev. Donald P. Merrifield, S.J. summarized the law school's building timetable and reported Phase III — Library Renovation — had been approved by the University's Trustees. If plans can be completed on time, work will begin in late spring with major demolition work, (1st floor original building), taking place during the summer when its affect on students will be minimized.

Father Merrifield also reported that a presidential search committee to select his successor was named and Rev. Robert Caro, S.J. is chairman.

Concluding, Father Merrifield announced that Charles Redmond, a 1975 law school alumnus and member of the Board of Visitors has been elected a Trustee of Loyola Marymount University.

Dean's Report — Dean Frakt reviewed the recent State Bar Examination results and commented upon them. Following the dean's remarks extensive discussion of this subject took place among the Board of Visitors. A detailed analysis was made and discussion will be continued at the next meeting.

Development — Father Merrifield announced the Burns Foundation had granted $500,000 to complete funding for the law school's Burns Academic Center and also committed to underwrite a Chair in Real Property for $1,500,000 payable $300,000 a year, beginning in 1984.

Chairman Jack Ostrow requested a report on the Burns Scholarship Challenge and it will be presented at the next Visitors' meeting. This report will show progress toward the $250,000 challenge grant goal. It will encompass the general alumni response and progress of the Visitors toward its $150,000 commitment.

SCOTT MOOT COURT A LOYOLA TRADITION

When the final rounds of the Scott Moot Court Honors Competition open April 12, it will be a continuation of Loyola's commitment to excellence in appellate advocacy, as well as an annual tribute to one of this state's greatest legal and civic leaders, Joseph Scott, second dean of the law school.

The 6 second year students who will argue the Galloway v. CBS defamation suit, currently on appeal in the California courts, join a select group of Loyola alumni who have earned the honor of participating in the Scott Moot Court Program. This look at the Scott Competition — one of the most prestigious activities at Loyola Law School — is a glimpse of the man it honors, and a review of the present and future of this event.

From England to Los Angeles

Joseph Scott was the son of uneducated parents who believed strongly in learning. This belief was instilled firmly in their son, born in Penrith, England in 1867, and it became a guiding force throughout his life. Scott attended Ushaw College and London University before immigrating to New York City in 1890 at the age of 22. His was not a smooth transition from one continent to the other . . . for five months, destitute and unable to find work, he took a job as a hod carrier. While working as a bricklayer's assistant, he heard of a teaching position for which he might be qualified and submitted his application. St. Bonaventure College in Allegany, N.Y. hired the young immigrant as a professor of rhetoric and literature, and he resumed his educational journey, a circuit he followed throughout his life.

Scott moved to California in 1883, when it was still possible to practice law without a formal degree. He became a student in the office of Judge J.S. Anderson and in 1884, at the age of 27, was admitted to the State Bar of California.

As a Californian, Scott was generous with his time and his talents. Among the many civic activities in which he was involved were the 1912 drafting of the Los Angeles city charter, 15 years on the Board of Education, and 11 years with the Chamber of Commerce, serving as its president in 1910.

His educational contributions to law grew along with his involvement with the city and country. He became second dean of Loyola in 1929, remaining in that position until 1934. Additionally, he received honorary degrees from Georgetown, Santa Clara and Notre Dame Universities.

Often encouraged to go into politics, Scott declined those suggestions, choosing instead to work behind the scenes. In 1928, he nominated Herbert Hoover as president of the United States at the National Convention.

Known for his dramatic and effective courtroom presence, Scott's greatest fame came as a trial lawyer. Among his clients were many national figures including evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson and Joan Berry, who sued Charlie Chaplin in a paternity suit that gained worldwide attention.

When Scott died in 1958, it was

The Scott Moot Court Honors Program is a student-administered competition. This year, with the guidance of faculty advisor Professor Lionel Sobel and the assistance of Professor Gideon Kanner, the following third-year students developed the problem and guided students through the competition:

Phyllis A. Meadows, Chief Justice
Karen Lee Freidenberg, Tompson Ong, Scott MacLatchie — Associate Justices
Carol Saborn — Chief Justice — Designate
Susan Gentile — Associate Justice — Designate

In addition, the Honors Board competitors, who represented Loyola in competitions nationwide, and assisted students in polishing several months after he turned 90. On that birthday occasion, politicians, educators, jurists, attorneys and friends of the civic leader met to honor him for his multitude of contributions to Los Angeles and his country. Among those signing a special birthday scroll were then-President Eisenhower, former Presidents Truman and Hoover, and Chief Justice Earl Warren.

The Scott Competition Begins

It was against this backdrop that Loyola Law School instituted the Scott Moot Court Honors Competition in 1952. Its purpose was to stimulate excellence in brief writing oral skills through practice rounds prior to the competition are:

Greg Bray, Dawn Coda-Wagener, Amy Friedman — national team
Janet Moore, Susan Tannenbaum, Kurt Weissmuller — state team
Joe Scudiero, Anne Yeager — specialty team

A necessary element of a successful competition is input from the faculty advisors who work with the individual competitors as they move through the program. This year, the Program was fortunate to have the assistance of Professors Carol Agate, Charlotte Goldberg, Allan Ides, Susan Liebler, Quentin Ogren, Dan Schechter, Joseph Sliskovich, Grace Tonner, Donald Wilson, Michael Wolfson, and Kenneth Vogel. Dean Arthur Frakt also served as a faculty advisor.

and oral advocacy, and the man the students sought to emulate was Joseph Scott, the program's namesake.

In the 30-plus years since its inception, the Competition has produced an elite group of talented advocates, most of whom had their first taste of "real" courtroom life as student competitors. Some of those alumni who were involved include: Joseph M. McLaughlin, '55; Ernest Long, '55; William Tucker, '56; John Brink, '57; Ronald Bevins, '57; James McCarthy, '61; Vincent Thorpe, '59; and Thomas Garcin, '52.

Many other alumni participated, of course, but this sampling indicates the type of attorney the Scott Competition helps produce.

Past Meets Present

When Otto Kaus, this year's Scott Moot Court Presiding Justice greets his associate justices, Clarke Stephens, Associate Justice for the California Court of Appeal, and Shirley Hufstедler, now a partner in Hufstедler, Miller, Carlson & Beardsley, it will be a reunion for the trio. They sat together on the California Court of Appeal several years ago, and the Scott Moot Court session marks their first opportunity to re-create that panel.

Moreover, Justice Kaus, a Loyola graduate, '49, was also faculty advisor to the Competition when he was a Loyola Law professor. He is currently Associate Justice of the California Supreme Court.

Anatomy of a Competition

For the 6 finalists, the Scott Moot

Court session is a rare opportunity to see and feel a "real" Court of Appeal at work. Their journey to win a spot in the finals was one that commenced last fall when they were among more than 100 day and evening students that began Introduction to Appellate Advocacy, with Professor Lionel Sobel, faculty advisor to the Scott Program.

The top third of that class, based on brief and oral argument scores, were invited into the Scott Moot Court Honors Competition, a student-run program that focuses on the development of individual appellate advocacy skills. Thirty-seven students successfully submitted briefs on an actual case on appeal in the California Courts — Galloway v. CBS, a defamation suit that questions the standard for private figure plaintiffs in defamation suits in this state. A survey and application of law since the New York Times, Rosenbloom and Gertz Supreme Court cases, as well as analysis of existing California statutory law, were necessary.

After brief submission, the student advocates began oral rounds to select the finalists who would vie for positions on the Scott Moot Court Honors Board, the third year student group that competes nationwide and administers the program. Former Scott members, attorneys and judges were invited to act as judges in 2 rounds that selected first 12, then 6 students who would go on to the finals. The top 10 advocates won positions on the Honors Board, with the 6 continuing to the finals to determine state and national teams, as well as to select best oralist. Two other students, who had ranked at the top of the first semester class, were invited to join the 1984 Board based on their grades and assisted in administering the program.

Honors

On April 12, in the midst of a champagne reception, the top students will be announced and toasted. However, all participants, the 1984 Honors Board and the competitors, will be recognized for their contributions to continuing and enhancing a long-standing tradition and cherished honor at Loyola . . . the right to align themselves with Joseph Scott as attorneys who are committed to excellence in appellate advocacy.

Attendance Record Broken

More than 250 jammed the Third Annual Institute for Corporate Counsel held March 15-16 at the Sheraton Grande Hotel. Among the subjects discussed were toxic torts, wrongful discharge, and protecting trade secrets.

The speakers for the two-day program included some of the best legal minds in the nation, according to Chair Robert C. Lobdell. "Wherever the best person was, anywhere in the country, we went to get him or her," he said. Among the experts who made presentations were William Baxter, former Assistant Attorney General, Anti-Trust Division, Justice Department; Terry Calvani, Commissioner, Federal Trade Commission; and Donato Evangelista, the vice president of IBM who has been in charge of the litigation process against Japanese manufacturers. Victor Palmieri, the corporate rescue specialist and currently president and chief executive office of Baldwin-United, spoke at the Thursday luncheon. Also, appearing on the program were Loyola faculty members Robert H. Sulnick and Daniel E. Lazaroff.

The Institute for Corporate Counsel is jointly sponsored by the Los Angeles County Bar Association and Loyola Law School. Plans for next year's Institute are being prepared and will be announced in late April.

A Law Day Red Mass will be held Tuesday, May 1 at 5:05 p.m. in St. Basil's Church, located in the Wilshire District. Cardinal Manning will celebrate the mass.

Roger M. Sullivan, '50 co-chairman of the sponsoring committee, cordially invites all Loyola alums to attend.

92% Employment

Placement Counsels Alums and Students

Loyola is in the vanguard of law schools recognizing the growing importance of career planning as a necessary part of legal education. One of the desired results of a professional education is satisfactory employment, however, Loyola Law School envisions more than just the traditional job brokerage function for its Career Planning & Placement Center. This philosophy is evident in the office's staffing. The Center has two professionals with masters level counseling degrees, and considerable experience in academic and business settings. Students and alumni will find the staff interested in their personal goals; skilled in career counseling; and knowledgeable about the legal marketplace.

Students are reading media and government reports about the approaching employment saturation level in the legal profession and question the viability of the marketplace for them after graduation. The Career Planning & Placement Center personnel understand the importance of providing information on the wide variety of legal employment opportunities currently available for Loyola students and alumni.

Alumni are seeking redirection or lateral movement and desire assistance in formulating effective job search strategies.

Law students are posing the questions: "What employment options are available to me? Where can I get information to help me make effective decisions?"

The Career Planning & Placement Center is equipped to respond efficiently to these inquiries.

In the spring of a student's first year, organized programs provide information to initiate the career planning process. Workshops and presentations are geared to develop student awareness of the need for gathering and assessing employment information. Counseling services encourage students to assess their needs, values, goals, and assist in the subsequent development of productive self-marketing strategies.

In addition to the emphasis on career development, the CPP Center is committed to generating employment opportunities of increasing diversity as warranted by student interest and the school's reputation. This function is facilitated through efforts of the administration, faculty and CPP staff, but also and most importantly, by the legal community's assessment of Loyola's students and graduates.

Every year more and more employers are recruiting on the Loyola campus, requesting resumes or listing student and attorney positions with the CPP Center. Over the past 5 years, based on information gathered from respondents to questionnaires, 93% of Loyola's graduates passing the bar have gained employment. Of this 92% figure, 75% have chosen private practice and the others opted for a variety of careers including public service and private enterprise.

To expand the opportunities for students to make more prudent decisions, the number of firms interviewing on campus has increased, i.e. 20% in 1983, and includes major accounting firms, public interest organizations and private business concerns with in-house counsel. State and federal government agencies also conduct outreach programs for Loyola's student body through separately scheduled information sessions, prior to interview dates. Additionally, a Faculty Judicial Clerkship Committee works with the Center in providing direction and resources for clerkship applicants on the state and federal levels.

These ongoing services of Loyola Law School's Career Planning and Placement Center provide a wealth of information for Day and Evening Division students and alumni seeking to make important career decisions.

needed and will be put in place at this time.

The "Into the 80's" building program was initiated in 1977 under then Dean Fred Lower '64. It was commenced to answer the growing needs of students and faculty and for financial and critical path planning considerations the program was divided into 3 phases.

Dedication in 1981 of the $4.6 million Fritz B. Burns Academic Center completed Phase I. This 4 story centerpiece of the campus has 6 classrooms, faculty and all administrative offices, a student lounge, bookstore and dining area. It also houses the semi-annual Loyola Law School art shows.

Nearing completion now is Phase II which includes construction of 3 freestanding classrooms, (now in use), and a chapel, almost finished, plus handsome landscaping. This activates architect Frank Gehry's academic village concept in an urban setting and provides a sense of community.

Preliminary drawings for Phase III have been submitted to the faculty building committee for evaluation, comment and approval. After a recommendation is forwarded the university's trustees for their similar process, selection of a contractor and beginning of work follows.
