Financial Options '82

Five Financiers Stress Foresight

The problem of rising educational costs and lower educational funding is not one that is likely to improve within the next few years, according to five financial experts speaking to Loyola students in July. But, there are unexplored resource options, which if taken advantage of, may help to ease the current cost of law school education.

Each of the five examined the limited, but never-the-less available resources, which they represented, at "Financial Options '82," a seminar sponsored by the Loyola Law School Financial Aid Office and the School's Alumni Association. The two-hour meeting helped ease the pre- and post-panic for many students who were anxious about qualifying for financial aid this year, due to changes made in federal loan eligibility requirements passed last November by Congress. The School's Financial Aid Office estimates that 15 to 20% of all Loyola students requesting aid for 1982-83, will not be eligible for educational loans through private lenders.

More than 200 students attended the meeting, listening attentively for the option which would best suit their financial situation and allow them to begin or complete a law school education without interruption. Michael Flanagan, Director of Financial Aid, reviewed the most current and probably most accessible means of assistance to students, the newly created CLAS (California Loans to Assist Students) program.

Under the CLAS program, a student borrows up to $3,000 a year at a 14% interest rate. CLAS is a "pay as you go" program, requiring a student to pay a monthly interest payment of $35 on a $3,000 loan and then pay the principal after the education is completed. Although the interest rate may seem steep, the loan is easily accessible and this is its attractiveness, according to Flanagan.

Also attractive, but less accessible, are personal loans, which were explained by Corporate and Executive and Personal Credit Officer of the Wilshire Bank, Brian Hahn. He extrapolated on the many variables in lending policy and advised students to "establish a relationship with a specific bank and a particular banker when trying to borrow money." As arbitrary as it may seem, lending these days includes a level of familiarity and trust between the borrower and the bank. Students should develop an asset sheet which lists bonafide credit and collateral sources, he said.

Hahn predicted that the prime rate will be going down in the near future, but cautioned that the customer will be sharing the risk in interest rates. "There's no cheap or easy money at banks anymore," he said.

The estimated nine-month first year student budget devised by the School's Financial Aid Office has risen from $8,435 (a single student living in an apartment plus tuition costs) in 1981 to $12,371 in 1983. Adding to the pain of these rising costs, the average Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) awarded in 1981 was $4,250 and will drop below this figure in 1983.

Assuming a student receives the maximum GSL, where then will the remainder of the money come from to subsidize educational and living costs?

Offering information about second mortgage trust lending was Ronald Knoll, a mortgage banker with the Charles Dunn Realty Company. A parent, or in some cases student, can borrow money against the equity in a home or business, pay the education bill in full, and then put the remainder of the money in a money-market account and accumulate the interest.

Knoll, who admittedly said that this type of borrowing option is not particularly appealing to either the lender or the borrower, added that "It's an expensive proposition and we may be the last guys in town, but sometimes you have no choice."

Financial resources which are planned well in advance of an education are still the best option, according to Thomas Curtiss, Jr., an attorney with McDonald, Halsted & Laybourne. Irrevocable trust funds, such as the Clifford, Crummey, or Present Interest Trusts, will provide sufficient educational funding but require a great deal of foresight.

Curtiss is particularly fond of the Crummey Trust, an irrevocable trust of any duration which is susceptible to annual partial funding by one or Ides received his bachelors degree from UCLA in 1971 and a master's from Loyola Marymount University in 1973. He clerked for the Hon. Clement F. Haynsworth, Jr., chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals, fourth circuit, from 1979-80. Ides entered private practice in 1981 and became an adjunct professor at Loyola in the summer of 1982. Ides will be teaching Constitutional Law and a Criminal Procedure Seminar on the First Amendment.

Florrie Young Roberts, clinical professor, has been in private practice since 1974. She completed her undergraduate studies at Stanford University in 1971 and received her juris doctorate from USC in 1974. She serves as a judge pro tempore for the Los Angeles Municipal Court. Roberts teaches Civil Procedure Workshop.

Corporate Counsel Slates March Seminar

Anti-trust, employment discrimination, products liability, and securities regulation are among the issues which will be discussed at the second annual Institute for Corporate Counsel (ICC) seminar, a joint project of Loyola Law School and the Los Angeles County Bar Association.

ICC was formed last year to assist in the continuing education needs of lawyers who are employed by corporations.

The seminar, scheduled for March 10 and 11 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel on South Hope Street, will address contemporary topics of concern for lawyers involved in corporate law situations. Although a completed panel of distinguished speakers is not fully confirmed, commitments have been secured from several nationally recognized attorneys. Included in this group are Paul Grossman and Barbara Lindemann Schlei (authors of Employment Discrimination Law), leading the panel on employment discrimination.

Further information and reservation data is available by calling Cecilia Morris at 213-736-1104.

Deans' Offices Rearrange Positions

Administration and responsibility changes in the Deans' Offices took place in July with the onset of Arthur Frakt's tenure as Loyola dean.

Associate Dean of Academic Affairs Daniel Stewart, who also served this position under former Dean Gerald Rosen, will continue on in the same capacity and be responsible for faculty and curriculum development, evaluation and supervision. The former Director of the Law Clinics Arnold Siegel has assumed the position of Assistant Dean for Student Affairs. Siegel will coordinate and supervise the administration of all student-related activities including the Admissions, Placement and Financial Aid Offices. Professor Mary-Lynne Fisher will serve as Acting Clinical Director for 1982-83.

Assistant Dean for Administration Leopoldo L. Ramos is responsible for the areas of budget, non-academic personnel, the new building and ancillary services. Former Assistant Dean for Student Affairs Lola McAlpin-Grant is now Assistant Dean for Special Projects and Visiting Clinical Professor of Law.

Four Join Full-Time Faculty

Two acting professors, one visiting professor and a clinical professor have been added to the Loyola Law School faculty this fall, evening-off the full-time faculty to 34 members for the year 1982-83.

Law School alumnus Allan Ides '79, has assumed the position of acting professor. Ides was a well-known student while at Loyola, being chosen for the high honor of clerk to the Hon. Byron R. White, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court from 1980-1981. He was the first Loyola student ever chosen for this position.

FROM THE DEAN

This is an exciting time at Loyola. Our faculty is growing in accomplishment as well as numbers. The student body has never been of higher quality. We are at the midpoint of our program to create a physical environment which reflects the vitality, diversity, cultural and intellectual richness of the Law School, Loyola Marymount University and the Los Angeles area. The honor roll of donors printed in these pages attests to the growing support which our efforts are receiving among our alumni and friends.

Of course, there are a few clouds on the horizon. Economic conditions, population trends, potential erosion of government support for educational programs and a host of other factors contribute to our unease. Perhaps the greatest of our fears is that just at the time when institutions of higher learning are at the peak of efforts to promote meaningful educational opportunities for all segments of the population, forces beyond our control threaten to turn us into a nation which sharply distinguishes the haves from the have-nots.

The opportunity for individuals from all walks of life to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps with some judicious aid from both the private and public sectors has been a hallmark of the American system. I believe that all would agree that these opportunities must be retained and enhanced.

Elsewhere in this issue, I address one of the most complex and difficult of the problems in providing appropriate legal education — that of affirmative action. I hasten to add that these thoughts are my own and are not intended to be understood as representing a consensus of the administration or faculty of Loyola. Nor do I purport to treat all of the complexities of affirmative action. Rather, I hope to provoke a constructive dialogue.

In the months ahead, the pages of the Loyola Lawyer will be open to you — the alumni, friends and faculty of the Law School — to share your views with us on subjects of concern to legal education and the profession of law. Through letters and articles, let us explore and hopefully move forward to solutions and a better understanding of issues which challenge us.

Parents Form
Active Association

Parents of Loyola students who have long requested an active role in their children's law school education (i.e. hosting seminars) rather than a passive role (i.e. signing tuition checks) are invited to join the now-forming Parents Association of Loyola Law School.

The organization had its introductory meeting on September 25 in the Student Lounge of the Fritz Burns Building. At that time, Loyola Dean Arthur Frakt extended an invitation to all parents of present and past students to join the Association and assist in forming the governing body, the Parents Advisory Board.

Parents who volunteered their time for the September 25 organizational meeting were Thomas Burrows, chairman for the day, father of Christopher A. Burrow '84, and committee members Lenore Schmitt (Claudia E. Schmitt '83), Anita K. Craig (Constance A. Craig '84), Edward and Martha Nelson (Peter R. Nelson '83), and Liberta Fry (Thomas N. Fry '83).

Once established, the Association will host activities for parents and students such as an annual Student Awards Program and a Parents Forum. Its primary goal is to keep parents informed, both on the status of the Law School and in its joining role with Loyola Marymount University.

Further information is available by calling Roni Johnson in the Development Office at 213-736-1046.

Law School
Chosen for Microcomputer
Pilot Project

The Law School Admissions Office will bring its service into the future with the acquisition of a Vector Graphic Model 4-30 microcomputer and an NEC Letter quality printer through an experimental 12-month pilot project sponsored by the Law School Admissions Service (LSDAS).

Loyola is one of 15 schools nationally chosen for the project to test the machines, which are designed to simplify the admissions process for smaller schools who are not in need of the more expensive computer systems. The systems being tested are relatively inexpensive, ranging in cost from $7,500 to $8,000. Additionally, the School has been made available a data management software package known as Data Manager and a word processor known as Memorite III.

The systems provide an in-house extended service on a day-to-day management level which is tailored to the Law School's needs and ready to provide reports and limited statistics analyses within the Admissions Office time frame.

Admissions' Office Manager Teresa Morales was designated as the project liaison representative from Loyola and underwent a week-long training session on the operation of the new equipment in Princeton, New Jersey. Morales is now responsible for training other Loyola support staff who will be using the equipment.

more donors. The advantage of the Crummey Trust is that it may be spread over a number of years. Additionally, there is not gift tax if the annual gifts of the donors do not exceed $10,000, and the trust may be terminated when the education or other purpose of the fund has been satisfied. The donors may use the principal as well as the income, and the trust assets are not included in the estate of the donors.

The Crummey Trust's one disadvantage is that the beneficiary is subject to a limited power to draw upon the money. This, plus the fact that a trust is a long term and not a short term solution to educational funding, make the Crummey one of the best of limited options. "There really are no magical solutions," said Curtiss, "so think Crummey."

A final speaker for the evening, Ruth Wilson, Director of Financial Aid at California Institute of Technology, elatedly told the audience that she was a member of the board of directors of a non-profit corporation which would make $100,000,000 in loans available to students.

The loans will be funded through the sale of tax-exempt bonds, and loan availability is dependent upon the success of sales. The bonds are expected to go on sale in September and if all goes well, a student will be eligible to borrow $3,000 (with similar requirements to that of the GSL) through this program at an interest rate of 14% (This is a CLAS loan option). The interest is to be paid immediately and the principal will be deferred until after the education is completed.

He earned his juris doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania in 1975 and a Ph.D. from the same school in 1977. He was a Brookings Economic Policy Fellow in 1975-76 and then an assistant professor of economics at State University of New York (SUNY), Buffalo, for four years. From 1979 to 1982 he was an adjunct assistant professor at SUNY, and also served as Director of Undergraduate Studies at Buffalo School of Law. Vogel was a consultant to the United States Department of the Interior on Tax Incentives in 1980-81.

MEET THE DEAN — Alumni who graduated before 1950 met with new Dean Arthur Frakt (right) on September 8 in the Faculty Lounge for a few hours of informal idea exchange. Frakt talked about updating student services, future additions to the faculty and initiating new professorial chairs and plans for revision of the curriculum.

MEETING THE EGALITARIAN IDEAL

by Arthur N. Frakt
Dean

More than a decade has passed since America's law schools, Loyola prominently and proudly at the forefront, committed themselves to a program of affirmative action — opening the profession of law to significant members of our population who were previously unrepresented. It is hardly necessary to reiterate the reasons why the practice of law, and the political, commercial, and societal power which is inextricably bonded to it, could not and should not remain an exclusively white Euro-American club excluding Blacks, Latinos, Asians, and females of all races and ethnic backgrounds from its "membership."

The means to this end were many. Loyola and other schools demonstrated a commendable willingness to experiment. Although traditional admissions criteria were not totally eliminated, they were modified, in order to admit many minority students who had demonstrated interest and potential for legal studies. Law schools recognized that significant financial aid was necessary so that the economically disadvantaged, many of whom belonged to minority groups, could devote full time to law study. Minority law student organizations were encouraged and subsidized and a variety of tutorial and preparatory programs were instituted.

"To be successful, the emotional and political rhetoric that obscures reality and which has so often plagued the best intentioned efforts to improve minority law programs must be stripped from the issue of affirmative action."

How successful have these efforts been? As far as white majority females are concerned — very successful! Today, the proportion of females at Loyola and most other major urban law schools is rapidly approaching 50%. Undeniably, some law firms and judges have not been fully reconciled to the equal role of women in the law. More troublesome yet is the disproportionately low number of appellate court judges but, there is every reason to believe that, barring a major social upheaval, this disparity will be largely remedied within a generation.

Ironically, law schools may take little credit for this gender revolution. It is clear that essentially we are talking about majority white females — the cultural and ethnic counterparts of the traditionally successful male lawyer. By and large, what law schools did for these women is to desist from actively discriminating against them. Women's progress has resulted from their own motivation, ambition, and ability. Freed of the cultural straight jacket which traditionally limited their societal roles, women have competed superbly with no particular consideration or advantage afforded to them by the law schools.

Similarly, members of those Asian-American and Latino groups which have a largely middle or upper-class background (such as members of South Florida's Cuban community who fled Castro in the 1960s) have been relatively successful once prejudices and initial linguistic barriers were overcome.

Unfortunately, the record of legal education for Black Americans and members of some Latino groups (and here the distinctions and differentiations among the multiple Latin societies are subtle and confusing) is a mixed one, at best. There is no question that Black and Latino law students and attorneys are greatly enriching the educational experience of law schools and contributing substantially to the legal profession.

On the other hand, many have failed in law school, and, tragically, of those who have graduated, a disproportionately large number have been unsuccessful on the bar examination in repeated attempts.

A number among my former students who are Black or Hispanic at least two successful judges, an important official of the Federal Trade Commission, and several highly successful attorneys in firms in Washington, New York, Philadelphia, and New Jersey as well as a number who have done significant work in their communities and for public service agencies. Thus, there is no doubt in my mind that affirmative action programs are both necessary and appropriate, and must be continued. The question, rather, is: in what manner and form? And, in these days of ever more restrictive budgets, how may limited funds be utilized in the most effective manner?

Loyola began to examine these issues seriously last year. A high priority has been placed on the collection and analysis of data which will guide us in reforming and refining the Law School's program. Alumni and other members of the bar are urged to aid the School in its quest for information and ideas in this area.

One principle is eminently clear. To be successful, the emotional and political rhetoric that obscures reality and which has so often plagued the best intentioned efforts to improve minority law programs must be stripped from the issue of affirmative action.

To aid in seeing the issues clearly, some hard facts must be squarely faced.

The most recent spring bar exam was a particularly distressing example of the difficulties encountered by some Black and Latino law school graduates. Keep in mind that the overall passage rate on this particular exam was a strikingly low 31.4%. Among White first time takers from A.B.A. accredited California law schools, the passage rate was 43.3%. But, in contrast, the first attempt passage rate for Blacks from the same law schools was only 6.7% (1 out of 15). For Hispanics, it was 26.1% (6 out of 23). Among repeaters, the percentages of successful minority bar takers was still discouragingly low (17.6% for Blacks and 29.6% for Hispanics).

Of course, among minority graduates who passed the bar, there are undoubtedly a number of inspiring stories of triumph over adversity. But the statistics of those who fail and fail again may be translated into volumes of personal tragedy. The sacrifice in years, money, emotions, family values and relationships are incalculable. It must be remembered that all of these and the many others who failed to graduate from law school were successful college graduates. Many had potentially bright futures in other fields of endeavor which will be difficult to reconstruct. Others will have to face the difficult task of restructuring their ambitions to utilize their legal training in other ways.

How could such a state of affairs come to pass when so many competent legal educators have devoted so much effort to affirmative action?

It is self-evident that our society simply does not reach the egalitarian ideal of equal opportunity. There are a great number of potentially high achieving Black and Latino children who are denied the basic educational, cultural, even nutritional building blocks upon which intellectual accomplishment is substantially dependent. Those who would deny the important role of environment in a child's development would do well to ponder the recent studies indicating that in the last generation, the Japanese nation has surged well ahead of the rest of the world in measurable intellectual ability. It may hardly be seriously suggested that this sudden spurt is based upon biological heredity as opposed to a stable productive cultural, social, and educational environment.

"It is self-evident that our society simply does not reach the egalitarian ideal of equal opportunity."

Society will never know how many potential Thurgood Marshalls and Constance Baker Motleys simply have never had the opportunity to develop their talents. Whatever the theoretical merits of the nation's current political course, it is clear that the gap between rich and poor is growing, lessening rather than expanding opportunities for achievement among the disadvantaged.

There are, in short, a relatively small number of Blacks and Latinos who reach the point in life — the status of college graduate — where they may even compete for a place in law school, let alone be assured of success. These minority collegians are pulled in many directions. The pool of minority candidates for law school is very limited, and the few most prestigious schools have, in the recent past, enrolled many of those whose aptitude tests would indicate that they could be readily assured of success in school and on the bar exams. Law schools have, therefore, taken risks with minority admissions, enrolling at least some applicants where the statistical probability of success is limited.

One of the myths that persists in obfuscating the real issue of improvement of minority performance in law school and success on the bar examination is that the LSAT is not a good indication of minority legal reasoning ability. The fact of the matter as demonstrated by exhaustive and continual validation studies is that the LSAT is as accurate a test for minority candidates as it is for all applicants. In fact, it may over-predict performance for some minority students.

The reason why the test may over-predict (that is, predict greater success than may actually be achieved) is unclear. One theory (mine) is that many bright minority students are over-praised and under-challenged by well-meaning but misguided majority teachers from grammar school through college. This well-intentioned but potentially disastrous form of racism may lead students to conclude that they need not work to their full capacity, or in the absence of challenge, limit the development of that capacity. Thus, when they go to law school and are faced with relatively demanding anonymous grading, they are simply not prepared for the challenge. Ironically, many of the predominantly minority colleges appear more honest in their grading of minority students than largely white majority institutions.

Another myth or half truth that must be dispelled is that law school grades and bar exams are not an accurate measure of legal ability.

Of course, no test can measure such intangibles as ambition, tenacity, honesty, human understanding, and many of the other attributes that are critical to success and achievement in the profession of law. But, it must be remembered that at or near the marginal passing level which is what we are primarily concerned with in this context, the question is not one of great unmeasurable attributes, but rather of whether the student possesses the minimal legal literacy necessary to adequately represent clients.

As any law professor or bar examiner will attest, the level of achievement represented by a C or C- grade and the understanding of legal issues demonstrated is minimal. Although such a low attainment level in one or a few aspects of the law is not necessarily fatal to an ability to practice successfully, a consistent record of bare passage or marginal achievement is often indicative of incompetence.

A corollary of the argument that law school exams do not test competence is the point that although students may have difficulty expressing themselves in the traditional language of the law, they nevertheless have a real understanding of the particular culture and linguistics of their community. This is a half-truth at best. An ability to understand and interpret the facts and viewpoints of the client is very significant, but, on the other hand, the language of the law and culture of the courts are not subject to racial or ethnic division. For better or worse, we all live within an Anglo-American legal tradition and we must know how to utilize it.

"Whatever the theoretical merits of the nation's current political course, it is clear that the gap between rich and poor is growing, lessening rather than expanding the opportunities for achievement among the disadvantaged."

Efforts to restructure the bar exam to better test those skills necessary for success in practice and, not incidentally, to eliminate racial and ethnic bias in the tests have not been particularly successful. The recent experiment in California with a "lawyering skills" exam did not produce demonstrable distinctions or improvements over the traditional bar exam for minority students. Of course, bar exams could be made substantially easier, or even eliminated. This would have the effect of eliminating whatever small protection the public may have against incompetent attorneys as well as encouraging those law schools who shirk their responsibilities by deemphasizing or inflating grades to graduate virtually all students.

If none of these assumptions or remedies are constructive or accurate, what is the solution to the law schools' minority dilemma? How can schools eliminate the familiar and degrading cycle affecting far too many affirmative action admittees

MICHAEL FLANAGAN, director of financial aid, has been chosen to serve on the program committee of the 1982 California Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (CASFAA) Conference, representing the California Graduate and Professional School Financial Aid Officers. The Conference will be held on December 11-13 in Anaheim.

WILLIAM HOBBS, clinical adjunct professor, attended a "Defending the Drunk Driving Charge" seminar this past July in Los Angeles. Additionally, he attended the California Deputy Attorney Association Summer Conference on June 29 in San Diego. Hobbs conducted court observation for police cadets of the Rio Hondo Police Academy at South Gate Municipal Court in July.

Professor GIDEON KANNER was a participant in the Engineering Foundation Conference on "Land Use Policy Through Taxation" at Franklin Pierce College, New Hampshire, in July. Kanner also spoke to the ABA convention in August, held in San Francisco, on "Inverse Condemnation" and debated Professor R. Freilich of the University of Missouri on the issue of whether monetary or specific remedies should be preferred in the case of taking of a property by excessive regulation.

LIONEL SOBEL, visiting professor, is editor of the Entertainment Law Reporter, a semi-monthly publication, and the author of the book "Professional Sports and the Law." Sobel has testified twice before congressional committees for considering legislation which affects the antitrust status of professional baseball.

WALTER TRINKAUS, professor, attended a conference of the American Society of Law and Medicine in 1980 in Los Angeles, and spoke on "Decision Making for Newborns." His comments were recently published as a chapter in the book, "Legal and Ethical Aspects of Treating Critically and Terminally Ill Patients," published by AUPHA Press of the University of Michigan in 1982.

DAVID C. TUNICK, professor, will be conducting seminars during the fall throughout the United States on the topic "Computer Law: Structuring and Negotiating Contracts for Hardware, Software, and Services."

He has also co-authored an article with DAN S. SCHECHTER, visiting professor, entitled "Normalization of First Year Law School Grades" which will appear in the Winter 1983 edition of the College and University Journal.

Professor GERALD F. UELMEN participated in a panel discussion on "Criminal Practice after Proposition Eight," sponsored by the California Continuing Education of the Bar, in Los Angeles and San Francisco last July. More than 500 California lawyers and judges attended.

Uelmen also wrote two articles; "A Walking Tour of San Francisco for Lawyers Attending the ABA Convention" for the August 1982 ABA Journal and "A Walking Tour of Sacramento Legal Landmarks for Those Attending the California State Bar Convention" in the September 1982 California Lawyers Magazine. Both articles were accompanied with photos taken by Uelmen.

Placement Center

"... and give me good abstract-reasoning ability, interpersonal skills, cultural perspective, linguistic comprehension, and a high sociodynamic potential."

Welcome First Year Class

by Joan Profant
Director of Placement

Some researchers claim that, during an interview, an interviewer makes a fairly concrete decision on an applicant about 90 seconds into their meeting.

It's a lesson finally learned about operating a legal placement office. The first few days, weeks or months of a student's exposure molds a framework for the law school experience, particularly reaction to student services. The first year class requires and deserves the most fully developed career counseling program. To that end, the entering classes of '85 and '86 will be pushed, prodded and lectured on the functions a placement office serves (and, also, the functions beyond our power). Additionally, they will learn what constitutes the issues in legal employment, and explore career options within law. Personalized contact will make the written material have meaning and warmth.

The transition period between preparing to enter professional life and actually entering professional life is sometimes troublesome. The Placement Office stands as a symbol of that usually painful introduction. However, first year students are eager, hopeful, objective and receptive. This year, building on experiences from last year, Placement will have an even more comprehensive program of information and education directed primarily towards entering students.

Unfortunately, this will not eliminate the cry of Loyola law students that Placement only helps the top 10%, or that the Placement Director isn't interested in the top 10%, but spends time only with recent admittees, or, the on-campus interview program is the most humiliating experience in law school. This will not eliminate these normal student complaints because individuals will remain caught in their anxieties. Facts and information are too intellectual and abstract.

Nonetheless, Placement contends that all the information and explanations will ensure better ultimate success for students. That's what Placement wants. That's what you will want as alumni. The Law School degree is expanded and lighted as each new class makes greater impact.

Placement has a detailed and interesting new Placement Handbook. The Alumni Association has some exciting new program ideas about career seminars. As Placement Director, I will give individual presentations to all sections of the Civil Procedure Workshops to educate, inform and involve students in School activities.

If Placement can capture the spirits and enthusiasm of its entering students, it will make good, involved and prospering perspective alumni. Hopefully, and with Placement's assistance, the warm handshake will be given to Loyola students when they appear for their first interview, and not when they walk down the aisle at commencement.

Affirmative Action

— that of failure, readmission, bare passage, delayed graduation, and repeated bar exam failures?

Loyola and other law schools, in reaffirming their commitment to affirmative action, continue to experiment with a variety of tutorial programs. These have ranged from mandatory pre-school summer institutes through voluntary tutorials in specific courses to special remedial programs for those in academic difficulty. Some have been conducted by regular faculty who are compensated for their efforts, while others have been voluntary and student-organized. They have ranged from full-year programs to a few days prior to commencement of the regular school year. Some programs have emphasized basic reasoning skills while others aim at upgrading levels of understanding in specific courses. All forms of tutorials suffer from some disability. Many, particularly, those which are mandatory and faculty run, are regarded as demeaning and racist and resented to one degree or another. After all, all law students are successful college graduates. To be suddenly told that they are in need of special remedial education so they can understand what goes on in law school is shocking to them, no matter how euphemistically the program is described!

Then, when the group is assembled and it is predominantly Black and Latino, what conclusions are the participants to draw? In one telling incident at Loyola recently, a majority admittee under affirmative action (ever since the Baake case, there are some) when informed that he must participate in the preliminary tutorial program responded, "Why should I? I'm not Black." In addition to the inevitably felt stigma, these programs increase the already substantial tension students feel as they begin law school, and, to the extent that they require extra class hours and assignments may, in the participants' eyes, limit the time they have to devote to their regular courses. These tutorial programs sometimes do little more than further the anguish the students are already feeling, merely by being participants.

There are a variety of other programs such as: voluntary study groups, informal seminars, programs offered by student bar associations and minority law student groups, speakers programs, and most importantly, the individual counselling, analysis, and advice which law professors freely and gladly give to students. These are all notable positive attributes of Loyola's program and are much more valuable to those students who have the ability to profit from them than are formal, required programs.

Are there other potentially viable programs? Certainly, courses at the college level in legal process or basic areas of law taught by law professors and graded with the same rigor applied to a first year law class could introduce the study of law under more easily managed, less tense circumstances. Successful students in such classes could be encouraged to apply to law school and could be targeted for financial aid. Experiments in teaching basic law at the high school level by teams of law students under the supervision of a professor have been useful in inspiring potentially talented minority youths. Reduced course loads and the targeting of a limited number of minority students for suffi-

1981 - 82: Year of Change and Achievement

THIRTEENTH DEAN SELECTED — Arthur N. Frakt, a 43-year old Rutgers University Law School professor, was chosen as the 13th dean of Loyola Law School, following a year-long nationwide search to fill the position.

"It is an honor to be selected as the administrative leader of an institution with an outstanding record of service and achievement and it is a challenge to maintain and consolidate those achievements so that the law school community will continue to be a major positive force in the legal life of Southern California," Frakt commented on his appointment.

Frakt, a professor and former associate dean at Rutgers since 1967, earned a bachelor's degree with honors at Rutgers University in 1961 and his LL.B. from Rutgers Law School in 1964.

J. REX DIBBLE DIES — J. Rex Dibble, sixth dean of Loyola Law School, died on November 6, 1981. He was 70. Dibble was dean of the Law School from 1959 to 1966 and accorded the title of Professor Emeritus when he retired from Loyola in 1979 after 41 years of service.

HONORS — For the second consecutive year, Loyola's National Trial Advocacy team competed on the national level after defeating 16 other California law school teams at the regional level. The Jessup International Moot Court team also made it to the finals after defeating four law schools in the Pacific Regionals. Additionally, Loyola hosted preliminaries for the oldest Moot Court competition in the country, the Far West Regional Moot Court competition, together with the barristers of the Los Angeles County Bar Association in November.

COMMENCEMENT — The Law School graduated 350 students on June 6 at the 61st commencement exercises and presented Associate Justice of the California Supreme Court Otto M. Kaus, a 1949 LLS graduate, with an Honorary Doctorate of Laws degree for his outstanding achievements in the legal field.

Former Law School Dean Gerald Rosen presented the keynote address.

CORPORATE COUNSEL — The Law School and the Los Angeles County Bar Association's Corporate Law Department's section joined forces this year to form the first Institute for Corporate Counsel (ICC) in Los Angeles.

ICC, a non-profit organization, was founded in response to the increasingly complex and diverse practice of corporate law and the need for continuing education programs which will be directed specifically to lawyers employed by these corporations.

The Institute held its first seminar last March at the Hyatt Hotel in Los Angeles and will continue to implement an annual program and provide a forum for discussion of problems encountered within the practice of law. Both the Advisory Board and Board of Governors are comprised of distinguished, nationally recognized attorneys.

PLACEMENT — Placement Center reports graduates passing either the fall or spring bar examination this year are 96% employed in law positions. The latest bar results (spring exam) showed Loyola students first attempt passage rate at 59.46%.

Additionally, the Center sponsored six career counseling seminars in conjunction with the Alumni Association and published the Placement Handbook, an "everything-you-always-wanted-to-know-about-getting-a-job" manual.

DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM — With two years remaining, the Greater Loyola Law School Development Program has $6,070,479 raised towards its $8,000,000 goal by 1984.

Of this, $5,067,176 has been raised for the building program and $1,003,303 will be put into a beginning endowment fund.

FRITZ BURNS BUILDING DEDICATED — Dedication ceremonies for the Fritz B. Burns Building were held on January 30, amid a host of community dignitaries including Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and Archbishop of the Los Angeles Catholic Archdiocese Timothy Cardinal Manning.

The building dedication signified the completion of Phase I of the Greater Loyola Law School Development Program. Phase II, the construction of a chapel, and three satellite instructional halls, is planned for fall 1982.

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES — The Advocates Program raised more than $150,000 this year towards the operational costs of the Law School. Of this, $13,090 was pledged by alumni during a three-day phonathon in March.

Socially, the Alumni Association continued to sponsor class reunions and highlighted the calendar year with the November Alumni Awards Dinner, held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. An unprecedented turnout of 500 alumni attended the dinner to honor Otto M. Kaus '49, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, with the Distinguished Achievement Award.

The Alumni Association also held a free picnic for its members at the LMU Birds Nest in July.

MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP ESTABLISHED — Friends of the late Richard A. Vachon, S.J. have established the Richard A. Vachon Memorial Scholarship Fund in honor of the former associate dean and his contributions to the Law School. The Scholarship received donations from more than 200 friends in 1981-82 and now has $23,000 towards its $50,000 goal for 1984. The Fund money will be used for an annual scholarship, which will be awarded to a third or fourth year student who has demonstrated significant achievement at the Law School and preferably is pursuing a judicial clerkship.

Additionally, the first Richard A. Vachon, S.J. Distinguished Service Medallion for humanitarian service to the community and the Law School was presented at this year's commencement. Recipient of the Medallion was Anne Meltzer, mother of handicapped 1982 graduate, Jenine Meltzer.

FACULTY WRITING PRIZE ESTABLISHED — Faculty members voted unanimously this year to award an annual Faculty Writing Prize to their LLS colleague who has made the most significant contribution to legal literature in a calendar year.

The first $2,000 award was made to International and Business Transactions Professor Donald T. Wilson for his newly published book, International Business in a Nutshell (West Publishing Company 1982).

Alumni Dinner — November 4

Anthony Murray '64 Chosen For Achievement Award

The first Loyola alumnus elected to the high honor of State Bar President, Anthony Murray '64, will be further honored on Thursday, November 4, when he will receive the 1982 Loyola Law School Distinguished Achievement Award at a dinner co-honoring him and the Golden Anniversary of the Class of '32.

The 1982 Awards Dinner, will once again be held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The gala celebration will be hosted by the Alumni Association Board of Governors and the School's Board of Visitors, with cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m.

Each year the Alumni Association honors an individual for outstanding contributions to the legal profession and the Law School. Last year's recipient was Otto Kaus '49, associate justice of the California Supreme Court.

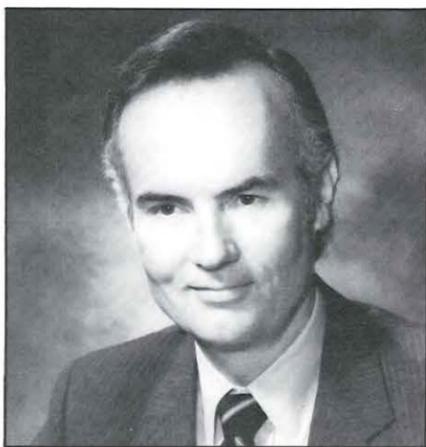

Master of Ceremonies for the evening will be Charles R. Redmond '75, Board of Visitor member (back by popular demand from last year's dinner); and guests will include Kevin P. Fiore '69, Alumni Association Board of Governor and chairman of the Dinner, Rev. Donald P. Merrifield, S.J., university president, and several of the Law School's former deans.

Born in Los Angeles, Anthony Murray attended preparatory school at the California State College of the Applied Arts and Sciences and then went to Pasadena City College. He received his J.D. from Loyola Law School in 1964. While at Loyola, he became a member of Alpha Sigma Nu, the national Jesuit honor society and Phi Alpha Delta, the national law honor fraternity.

Murray associated with Ball, Hunt, Brown, and Baerwitz, Los Angeles, in 1964 and then formed his own firm of Hitt & Murray, Long Beach, in 1968. The two firms merged in 1979 and Murray is now a partner.

Murray has been a member of the Law School adjunct faculty since 1979, teaching Civil Trial Advocacy.

He has held a number of memberships and chairmanships on State Bar of California committees leading to his election as President for 1982-83. Murray will continue to be a member of the State Bar Board of Governors until 1983, as well.

Murray is the former chairperson for the State Bar's Criminal Law Section (1978-79), and was a member of the Judicial Nominations Evaluations Committee (1978-79) and Disciplinary Board (1975-1978). He is also the former chairman of the Legislations Committee of the Criminal Law Section.

Other affiliations include the California State Bar Local Administrative Committee No. 36 (1970-1973), and former State Bar Trial Examiner. He is a member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the Long Beach Bar Association, for which he served as a Board of Governor from 1977-78.

Murray is a member of the American Bar Association and a member of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He served on the Ad Hoc committee of Grand Jury Reform for the Ninth Circuit Judicial Conference.

He has two children, Thomas, 13 and Matthew, 25, and resides in Long Beach.

Tickets for 1982 Awards Dinner are $35 each, which includes parking, to expedite the end-of-evening exit. There will be a no-host bar during the cocktail reception. Complimentary hors d'oeuvres will be served.

Alumni will be receiving an invitation to the event in October's mail, but further information is available by calling Roni Johnson, Office of Development, at 213-736-1046.

Alums Fund Classroom

70's Decade Looks to the Future

The Law School is looking towards the majority of its alumni who have graduated between 1970 and 1979 to propel the "Instructional Hall of the 70's: A Look to the Future" building campaign for the funding of one of the two freestanding classrooms to be built this year.

The $250,000 program will solicit funds from the 3,131 alumni who have graduated in the 70's, targeting a goal of $50,000 each year until 1987. Individual class goals of $27,500 from alumni who have graduated between 1970 and 1974, and $22,500 from those class members graduated between 1975 and 1979 will be sought on a year-to-year pledge program.

Graduates of the 70's are invited to participate in the program by making a five-year pledge towards the Instructional Hall of the 70's with an annual gift of a varying sum. Special recognition will be awarded to each donor, in addition to automatic membership inclusion in The Advocates program. A commemorative bronze plaque will be permanently placed near the entrance of the Hall, with the names of all contributors engraved upon it.

Heading-up the 70's program is Claire Van Dam '73, co-chairperson for The Advocates program. Assisting Van Dam with this program is Roman Silberfeld '74, chairman of Special Projects for The Advocates.

Alumni interested in participating in this program (either in dollar donations or volunteer solicitation efforts) should contact Mark Weiner, Assistant Director of Development/ Annual Giving and Alumni Relations, at 213-736-1044.

Advocates Exceed Dollar and Donor Goals

The Advocates, Loyola's annual fund donor group, proved for the third consecutive year that goals can never be set too high if commitment to attaining them is made by Loyola alumni.

Exceeding their original $150,000 goal by more than $5,758, The Advocates more than doubled the amount of money raised just three years ago according to Roman Silberfeld '74, chairman of the last two successful drives. He pointed out that a $155,758 annual fund is equal to the interest income of more than a $1,000,000 endowment.

Succeeding Silberfeld as chairman of the 1982-83 campaign will be Guillermo W. Bill Schnaider '69, who has set The Advocates goal at $162,500. Claire Van Dam '73 will serve as vice-chairperson for the Fund and chairperson for the newly established 1970's Campaign.

A portion of the money raised through The Advocates for the next five years will be earmarked for the construction of the Instructional Hall of the '70's, one of the three freestanding classrooms planned for Phase II of the Greater Loyola Law School Development Program.

Action

cient financial aid to permit them to avoid outside employment may be more productive than the spreading of lesser sums to a large number of students.

Ultimately, law schools are not in a position to radically increase the flow of potentially excellent minority students. Society as a whole must bear the responsibility for providing the early and continued educational opportunities to expand the pool of qualified minority law candidates. Until then the law schools, the minority students and their organizations, and the bar as a whole, must demonstrate resolve, patience, tolerance, and honesty to continue to strive to do whatever is possible within the limits of their resources to encourage and stimulate minority success, recognizing that for every success there will also be pain and disappointment. This pain may be minimized if both the admissions and readmission process is informed and based upon the best predictive data available. The goal should be to afford an opportunity to study law under encouraging and helpful conditions to those minority students who have a fair, reasonable chance for success and to have the courage not to admit or readmit those who may be emotionally appealing but whose potential for failure is high.
