"All of you must seize the opportunity, whenever and wherever presented, to be just, to act according to conscience, and to bite the bullet," Honorable Damon J. Keith told 314 graduates at the School's 60th commencement exercises, Sunday, June 7.

Keith, United States Court of Appeals Judge for the Sixth Circuit, delivered the keynote address and received an Honorary Degree of Juris Doctor at the ceremony, which was held on the Loyola Marymount University campus in Westchester.

He spoke of "becoming involved," and quoted Dr. Martin Luther King as saying "We often find that on some positions, cowardice asks the question, 'Is it safe?' Expediency asks the question, 'Is it politic?' Vanity asks the question, 'Is it popular?'"

"There comes a time when one must take a stand that is neither safe, nor politic, nor popular."

Judge Keith said. "But one must take it because it is right."

Reminding the commencement audience that "as we look back in history, great movements have been started with the action of a single individual," Keith noted that "Lawyers are among the best educated and most highly motivated of American citizens. As such," he said, "we have a special responsibility to use our skills to lead America through the twilight of fear and into a new morning of freedom."

Quoting Benjamin Mays, president emeritus of Morehouse College, Keith said, "It must be borne in mind that the tragedy in life doesn't lie in not reaching your goal. The tragedy lies in having no goal to reach. It isn't a calamity to die with dreams unfulfilled, but it is a calamity not to dream. It is not a disaster to be unable to capture your ideal, but it is a disaster to

Father Vachon Dies at 61

Rev. Richard Andrew Vachon, S.J., associate dean of the Law School, died Wednesday, June 10, 1981, at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica following a short illness. He was 61.

Richard Vachon was born on September 14, 1919 in Tanana, Alaska. He attended Loyola High School in Los Angeles and joined the Society of Jesus in 1937. He was ordained a Roman Catholic Priest in 1950.

Father Vachon was a graduate of Gonzaga University where he earned his bachelor's degree in 1943 and his master's degree in 1944 in philosophy. He received an LL.B. from the University of San Francisco in 1956 and a doctorate of law in 1962 from Columbia University.

He began as an instructor of law in 1957 and later was assistant professor of law at the University of San Francisco from 1959 to 1961 teaching in the field of contracts and conflict of laws.

Father Vachon joined the Loyola Law School faculty in 1962, teaching courses in constitutional law, legal method, conflict of laws, torts, trusts, corporations and remedies. From 1968 to 1969 he served as interim dean of the Law School, and after returned to full-time teaching. On July 1, 1979 Father Vachon became associate dean, serving that position until the time of his death.

Funeral services were held at the Sacred Heart Chapel on the Loyola Marymount University campus Saturday, June 13, 1981. Father Vachon was buried at the Jesuit Cemetery in Santa Clara, California.

FROM THE DEAN

As this column is being written, the 1980-81 academic year is behind us and the 1981-82 year has not yet begun. I should therefore comment on both.

The academic year ended clearly. The School moved forward in depth, breadth and spirit. Applications for admission increased in both numbers and quality. Placement activity reflected our external efforts as 155 law firms arranged to interview our students on campus, that number jumping from less than 30 law firms interviewing three years ago prior to the appointment of Joan Profant as director of the Placement Center.

Bar results for both day and evening full-time students testing for the first time continued on par with the best schools in California. Several students accepted clerkships at the federal and high state levels.

Substantial progress was made in development activities as we look toward successful completion of our "Into the Eighties" program goal. To date, program support has been largely a result of a few major donors (particularly the Burns estate), but a strong base has now been laid for our future. The Development Department, under the direction of Robert Cooney, with the assistance and cooperation of University President Donald Merrifield, S.J. and the University staff, is to be commended.

The Alumni Board of Governors helped in materially increasing the number of gifts to the Advocates Program and in total we exceeded all previous fund campaigns as well as our budget total. Roman Silberfeld '74 and Brain Brandmeyer '62, as chairpersons of the Advocates, are to be complimented for their successful efforts.

Our Board of Visitors was strengthened with the addition of Judge Manuel Real '51, Burton Cohn '77, Barton Beek '55, John Castellucci, Carl Karcher, Bob Loeffler, Charles Redmond '75, Tom Garcin '52, and Jack Thorpe '51. We now have active committees seeking capital support from foundations and industry.

The Law School has also been strengthened by major changes in our administration during the year. New appointments include Frank Real '80, as registrar, Michael Flanagan as director of financial aid, and Steve Johnson as director of operations and plant. In addition, we established a separate department for accounting and budgeting under the direction of Betty Shaw. These changes have prepared us for difficult financial times which lie ahead for private education.

The faculty is, of course, the primary source for our academic excellence, that of our students, and the performance of our graduates. Through various committees, the faculty revised our clinical program, acting to stem grade inflation and to normalize grades, as well as making several significant curriculum revisions. A special committee, perhaps one of the most important ever, conducted an extensive study regarding the relationship between the faculty and the Law School. This study will be the basis for a faculty retreat early in the new year.

All else, of course, was overshadowed by the untimely and shocking death of our dear friend and colleague Dean Richard A. Vachon. His death was a great loss to the School and particularly me, as we had developed a close personal and professional relationship. His long and unique academic experience melded with my business experience to form a type of leadership which will not easily be replaced. It will present a challenge for the future.

Now we prepare for 1981-82. By the end of October, we will be occupying the new Burns Building. Sufficient funds will be in-hand soon to start Phase II of the Building Program, which is the erection of the self-standing classrooms and the new Moot Courtroom. Some new faces will be joining us in the classrooms. Two visiting professors will fill vacancies in our full-time faculty and we are now seeking replacements for Professor McDermott who is on leave to visit the University of Vermont School of Law and Professor Liebler who has taken leave to become Special Counsel to the Chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission. Professor Arnie Siegel has agreed to serve as acting associate dean until final decisions are made.

We end the year and start a new one on an extremely high note: Law School alumnus, faculty member and sincere friend, Judge Otto M. Kaus '49, has been elevated to the Supreme Court, the highest court of our state. We are indeed honored and proud.

Sincerely,

Theo. A. Bruinsma

VACHON REMEMBERED

Father Vachon Scholarship Raises $15,000 To Date

TRIBUTE

by Professor Lloyd Tevis '50

The Richard A. Vachon Memorial Scholarship, established in memory of the Law School's late associate dean, raised $15,000 as of July 15, 1981, announced Dean Theo. A. Bruinsma.

"As we remember Father Vachon and his countless deeds of kindness and service to our students and alumni, it is fitting an endowed scholarship bearing his name should be started to benefit needy and worthy students." Bruinsma said the Scholarship will be available each year and all students will be invited to submit their applications.

Fifteen colleagues, friends of the Law School and students were invited to serve on the scholarship committee which will establish criteria to award the donations and also commission an artist to paint an oil portrait of Father Vachon for display in the new Burns Building.

Donations to the Fund should be made payable to the Richard A. Vachon, S.J. Memorial Scholarship and forwarded to the Loyola Law School Development Office.

Father Vachon once told me that he had decided that his role at the Law School was that of utility infielder. That choice of role tells us much about him. When there was a need, he would offer himself to fill it.

Twelve years ago, it was essential that a member of our faculty should serve for a year as Interim Dean. That position is one that has no future, yet carries with it all the responsibilities of permanent Dean. Nevertheless, he cheerfully undertook the job. In the course of his performance he suffered a heart attack. Two years ago, despite that medical history, he willingly assumed the position of Associate Dean with expanded responsibilities.

For 19 years this was his pattern. On many occasions, if no instructor was available for a course that had to be offered, he would volunteer to teach it. Most recently this occurred when he scheduled himself for a heavy teaching assignment next fall despite the increased administrative burdens he expected to carry next year. In these and many other ways Father Vachon put the interest of the Law School ahead of his own academic career.

He had a superior mind and exceptional ability. He could readily have carved out for himself a far greater reputation as a legal scholar. Instead he dedicated himself to the common good. Such self-abnegation is seldom fully appreciated until it has been taken away. I know that our already substantial appreciation of what he did for us will grow in the months and years ahead.

One word that fits Father Vachon is "loyalty." Not only do I refer to his fidelity to the Law School, but

School's Legal Service: Help for the Needy Needs Help

by Adrienne Morea

It's been dark outside for a couple of hours but inside the building the group is bustling about as if the regular workday has just begun. One member of the group enters a fluorescent-lit room, smiles at the two people already seated at the table and squints down at a case report in front of him.

He is a lawyer. No doubt he has read many reports of similar nature. This one is a routine case which involves a car accident and an uninsured motorist. But that's where the routine ends. The lawyer will not handle this case during the course of his normal work day, nor will he accept a fee for the work he has done.

Solving this case will bring satisfaction often greater than that of the usual monetary gain — it will bring a level of humanitarian reward. The lawyer's normal fee has been waived for this case and he is volunteering his services pro bono as a personal commitment to his belief that "not only the rich go free."

Tonight he is one of a group who are all graduates of Loyola Law School. There are 38 different groups who participate in this voluntary program sponsored by the Public Interest Law Office of the Los Angeles County and Beverly Hills Bar Association. But, Loyola is the only collective group representing a law school alumni association sponsoring free legal services to the poor.

Loyola first implemented this program in affiliation with the Public Counsel office in Los Angeles. Since that time, the Legal Services Committee of the Alumni Association Board of Governors has attempted to sponsor four "Loyola Nights" a year, whereby Loyola graduates meet at a West Sixth Street building to provide indigent clients with pro bono legal representation.

"The private bar has an obligation to serve the poor," says Robert Myers '75, one of the four attorneys attending this particular "Loyola Night."

"The idea is to hook-up attorneys with real people", Myers said. Many attorneys because of the nature of practice never interview clients in flesh and blood. It's good experience. So our motives are not strictly altruistic."

The Legal Service Project is one of the three principal programs that Public Counsel delivers. They provide free services to clients referred by the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles. Although popular belief contends that federal funding of legal service for the poor has all but guaranteed equal access to justice in America, the reality is much harsher. According to an annual report of the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles (1979), its 62 staff attorneys are able to provide services to less than 15 percent of eligible clients in need of services.

Therefore, Public Counsel, its sponsoring Bar Association, their barristers sections and the Legal Aid Foundations of Los Angeles joined together in 1978 to create the Volunteer Legal Services Project. The enormity of the unfulfilled demand for legal service for the poor requires that the pro bono program be tightly focused. The present service areas are real property, fraud and foreclosure, landlord/tenant, consumer and uninsured motorist cases.

Placement Center

by Joan Profant,
Director of Placement

"Law firm hopping," that is the movement of experienced lawyers from law firm to law firm, is currently a hot topic among professionals involved with attorney recruitment and placement.

Placement people across the country are talking about organizing or upgrading alumni services which would assist lawyers in finding position they are interested in and staying at for a lengthy period of time. The law firms are privately debating and publically attending workshops on how best to deal with the problems presented by lateral hires in firms of all sizes.

The basic question remains: Is there a need for an expansion of experienced lawyer placement facilities? Consider the report from the July National Law Journal about lawyers marketing their experience and switching firms. The ABA representative, Ken White, says there is substantially "more lateral movement than there was several years ago." It was also reported that "lawyers have developed less loyalty to firms."

This attitude will become more common in the future. "Lawyers will go through their careers by working at three or more firms," said White.

In an American Lawyer article, "Law Firm of the Future," author Steve Brill predicted the "same fluid state for new lawyers. Accordingly, it will create additional burdens for law firm management."

Some of the proposals to alleviate "law firm hopping" revolve around implementing a national placement service perhaps organized through the National Association for Law

Placement (NALP). NALP, with a membership of 500 law firms, law schools, government agencies, military, corporate, and Bar association members, might be able to provide leadership for this difficult task. In addition, the personnel at Martindale-Hubbell have been researching their own system for national placement service. In 1979, the ABA researched the need for a service, but could not allocate funding.

Meanwhile, at Loyola's Placement Center, there is the Alumni/Attorney Job Bulletin, one answer to a more complete way for lawyers to search out their right position and for law firms to search out prospective colleagues. The Bulletin was designed to encourage firms to simplify their hiring tasks by placing descriptions of their needs and allowing us to advertise them to those candidates who are on our monthly mailout.

Placement's free mailing of the Bulletin is far less expensive than the 20 percent annual compensation required from a firm using the services of a local headhunter. It's more manageable than the post office box in legal newspapers and employers may call listings into the Placement Office and use correspondence to amplify the criteria to be used in their selection.

Candidates desiring to be on the Bulletin mailing list should provide a copy of a recent resume and a covering letter to the Law School Placement Office, advising them about interest and current status.

Although the Bulletin service does not include referral and matching work, it does serve as a clearinghouse for employer and job seeker, providing both with a much more defined meeting ground than they would otherwise be able to obtain.

"It's a question of too many people and limited resources," says David Velasquez '78, chairperson of the Loyola Legal Services Committee. "There are a lot of people who need legal help, have no money, and therefore feel they have no place to go. The attorneys that have participated see the program as a great success and want to repeat their experience."

Ultimately, the committee would like to be able to schedule at least four "Loyola Nights" annually. Five volunteer attorneys are needed for each Loyola Night to provide counseling and representation to a maximum of 10 clients. Volunteers meet for approximately two to three hours an evening and see two clients each night. After the initial meeting with the client, the attorney

County Bar Joins Loyola: Corporate Counsel Institute Created

Loyola Law School and the Los Angeles County Bar Association's Corporate Law Department's section have joined forces to form the first Institute for Corporate Counsel in Los Angeles.

This non-profit organization has already planned an initial seminar for March 1982 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Los Angeles.

The Institute was founded in response to the increasingly complex and diverse practice of corporate law and the need for continuing education programs which will be directed specifically to lawyers employed by these corporations.

Prior to the Institute's formation, a special committee of the Corporate Law Department's Section of the Los Angeles County Bar conducted an intensive investigation into the need for corporate continuing education.

Results showed that 1.) there was no mechanism in the Los Angeles area for regularly soliciting the advice and views of general counsel concerning the continuing education needs of lawyers who are employed by corporations and 2.) there is no comprehensive continuing legal education program tailored to the needs of corporate counsel.

The new Institute for Corporate Counsel will plan and implement an annual two-to-three day program and will provide a forum for discussion of problems encountered within the practice of corporation law.

Seminars will include distinguished, nationally recognized attorneys who will also staff the Institute's Advisory Board and Board of Governors. Together they will devise a curriculum which will be selected from input received from corporate law practitioners.

Corporate Counsel interested in participating in the Institutes' development are invited to write the Institute for Corporate Counsel, 1440 W. Ninth Street, Los Angeles, California, 90015.

ON CAMPUS

WINNER of the 1981 St. Thomas More Medallion, presented annually to an outstanding individual in the legal profession by the Loyola Law School St. Thomas More Law Honor Society, is California Chief Justice Rose Bird (left). With her at the April luncheon held at the Biltmore Hotel are presenters Superior Court Judge Paul Egly (middle), and Kathleen Benjamin '81 (right), president of the School's honor society. The Chief Justice, upon acceptance of the award, told more than 350 lawyers in attendance to "have the courage to take unpopular stands in order to uphold First Amendment guarantees." She noted that "judges are easy targets at a time when few people understand the role of the courts. Whereas politicians are expected to be responsive to their constituents' special interests, judges must remain responsible to the Constitution and defend the Bill of Rights."

FACULTY FORUM

Dean THEO. A. BRUINSMA was recently initiated into Alpha Sigma Nu, the national Jesuit Honor Society, upon recommendation of Rev. Donald P. Merrifield, S.J., university president. The society recognizes outstanding scholarship and leadership.

SIEGEL APPOINTED ASSOCIATE DEAN

Arnold I. Siegel, formerly director of clinical programs at the Law School, has been appointed acting associate dean, announced Dean Theo. A. Bruinsma in June.

In his new assignment, Dean Siegel will be responsible for all academic matters, the scheduling of classes, curriculum development, liaison with the faculty, and academic counseling.

"I'm learning a great deal about the operations of the Law School and enjoying the additional contact with my colleagues and students," said Siegel about his new appointment. "I've noticed that you never get anything completely settled around here," he said. "There's always something new walking through the door."

Siegel, a 1971 graduate of Stanford Law School with a juris doctorate of law, completed his undergraduate work at Cornell University in history. After completion of studies at law school, he was staff attorney for the Legal Aid Society of Pasadena from 1972 to 1974 and then an attorney in a Los Angeles law firm.

Prior to accepting the deanship, Siegel was in charge of Loyola's clinical programs since 1979, supervising a staff of 10 and working with more than 100 students per semester. He concurrently was clinical professor of law and supervising attorney for the Law Clinics. He has also taught lawyering skills at the Law School, instructing and training students in all facets of legal practice including interviewing, counseling, negotiation, drafting of pleadings and documents, discovery, case strategy and court appearances.

Dean Siegel is past president of the East Arroyo Resident's Association, a member of the Jewish Big Brother, the Cornell University Alumni Secondary Schools Committee and the Stanford Law Society of Southern California.

His professional activities include Bar memberships with the State Bar of California, the United States District Court, the Central and Southern Districts of California, the United States Court of Appeals, ninth circuit, and the Los Angeles County Bar Association.

ney proceeds with the case with limited assistance from Public Counsel.

The object of Loyola's legal service committee is to schedule these rights with regularity and for this they need positive commitments from Law School alumni. All Loyola alumni are invited to participate in the program. Further information for those interested in this program is available by calling David Velasquez at 392-4177.

DAVID C. TUNICK, professor, will be conducting seminars in Denver, Seattle, Tulsa, and Dallas during the remainder of 1981 on the topic "Computer Law: Structuring and Negotiating Contracts for Hardware, Software and Services."

His article "Computerized Banking: Some Legal Problems," appeared in the Commercial Law Journal of May 1981. Tunick will also be participating in the Association for Computing Machinery's 1981 Annual Conference to be held in November in Los Angeles. He will conduct a session on "Computer Law: An Overview."

Professor GERALD F. UELMAN, was named to the advisory committee for a new training program in drug abuse for all Los Angeles County judges, prosecutors, public defenders and probation officers. He also testified before the Criminal Justice Committee of the California Assembly on proposed constitutional amendments to limit the exclusionary rule in June.

Uelman appeared on two television shows in May: a KNBC-TV news series on violent crime and a KABC-TV news series on the exclusionary rule. He recently authored two articles which will appear in the FORUM Magazine (published by California Attorneys for Criminal Justice) in September 1981, one being an interview with former Governor Edmund Brown and the other a "Concise History of Capital Punishment in California."

A new edition of his book, "Drug Abuse and the Law" will be published by Clark Boardman Co. in August. The book was co-authored with DR. VIC HADDOX of Loyola's adjunct faculty and is currently in use as a textbook at 40 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

GARY T. WIENERMAN '70 clinical professor, participated as a faculty member for the University of San Francisco's seminar on "Protecting Children Through the Legal System," in June. The seminar was sponsored by the American Bar Association National Institute in cooperation with the Young Lawyers Division, the National Legal Resource Center for Child Advocacy and Protection, and the National Association of Counsel for Children.

DEVELOPMENT

CAPITAL GIFTS REACH $5.2 MILLION

The Greater Loyola Law School Development Program has soared past the $5,000,000 mark, leaving only 38 percent of the $8,000,000 goal remaining by 1984.

Board of Visitors' Chairman John E. Anderson '50 reported this good news as fiscal 1981 final figures were compiled at the spring meeting held at his Bel Air home. Highlighting Mr. Anderson's report was the announcement of a $500,000 grant from the Burns Foundation.

Chairman Anderson also announced that several development committees are now beginning the active phase of their work. Prior to this, committees were being organized and a plan developed to establish a comprehensive plan of action and a timetable. Committees now at work include Business, Foundations and Alumni.

Leading the Business Committee are Co-Chairmen Burton R. Cohn '77 and Charles R. Redmond '75. Their committee is comprised of Law School Alumni Coe Bloomberg '72, Alexander H. Good '75, William S. Hart '72, David Laufer, '67, Patricia Lobello '67, and Beverly Tillett '80.

also his fidelity to people both in and out of the Law School. His friends were his friends. He would not desert them in times of trouble. I, and many others can attest to that.

Of course, friendship is not confined to lending a helping hand. We need it in our joys as well as in our sorrows. Father Vachon was a simply marvelous person with whom to share good news. Who will ever forget the smile that would spread on his face, and his familiar response: "Terrific!"

As a colleague, Father Vachon was respected for his learning and his understanding of the law as well as other disciplines. His was not a purely theoretical understanding. Concurrently with his teaching, he found the time to engage in the practice of law so that he could bring that practical experience to his classes.

For many of us, he was the faculty grammarian. He responded graciously to requests that he read the writings of others. He would give his comments on the substance of these writings and also point out our grammatical lapses.

Of course, not everyone found Father Vachon to be as I have been painting him. In his position of Associate Dean he had to say "no" on many occasions. "Nos" are frequently not well received. But "nos" must be said to preserve the integrity of any system, and they must at times be said to promote the common weal. He would be disappointed when colleagues or students would seek to promote their own ends without consideration of the impact on the school or on others. He could and did, show his disappointment when others did not come up to his expectations. Thus, to some, his public image was that of a stern administrator.

FRITZ B. BURNS BUILDING: calculated completion and occupation is for November 1981.

William T. Huston, a member of the Law School's Board of Visitors, is the Foundation Committee chairman. Huston, working closely with the Development Department and Law School alumni, is preparing a comprehensive list of foundations whose purposes and areas of support indicate a good opportunity for favorable consideration and an eventual grant. At this time several applications have been filed with foundations and progress is being closely monitored.

The Alumni Committee is co-chaired by Thomas E. Garcin '52 and John G. Thorpe '51, both members of the Board of Visitors. Strategic opportunity for favorable consideration and an eventual grant. At this time several applications have been filed with foundations and progress is being closely monitored.

have no ideal to capture. It is not a disgrace not to reach the stars, but it is a disgrace to have no stars to reach for. Not failure, but low aim is a sin."

Concluding, Judge Keith said, "I want each of you here to use your excellent legal training and minds to secure for all Americans 'equal justice under the law.' That is your calling, that is your mission, and indeed, that should be your commitment."

Keith was nominated to the United States Court of Appeals in 1977 by former President Jimmy Carter. Prior to his appointment, he served as a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan. In 1975, he became Chief Judge of the District Court.

During his 10-year tenure as federal district judge, Keith rendered several significant legal decisions including the 1971 White Panther Wiretap Decision, which held that in cases involving national security, a warrantless search is nevertheless an illegal search and wiretapping without judicial authorization is against the law and in violation of our 4th Amendment Constitutional rights. The plan's basic premise is that alumni volunteers will seek three-to-five year commitments and that the Alumni will reach a goal of $2,200,000. Already more than 25 percent ($600,000) has been raised from advance gifts.

Class Chairmen already working are Michael J. Clemens '51, James N. Kenealy '52, Gilbert Dreyfuss '53, Joseph M. McLaughlin '55, Robert C. Haase, '56, Thomas E. Workman '57 and John B. Bertero '59. Each of these chairmen has enlisted their class members to assist them in achieving their goals.

Also named as decade chairmen, were Brian K. Brandmeyer '62 for the 1960's and Edward M. Phelps '75 for the '70's.

Concluding the report Mr. Anderson said "Everyone — alumni and friends — must work together and this will mean success. A success not only in dollars raised, but also one that will lead to a more thorough understanding of Loyola Law School and its needs." He also extended his "thanks" to the many volunteers who have joined the effort to date and urged more to become involved.

Information concerning the Program may be obtained from Robert A. Cooney, Director of Loyola Law School Development by telephoning 642-3135 or writing the Development Office at 1440 West Ninth Street, Los Angeles, California 90015.

Other commencement activities included graduate Richard Callahan addressing his fellow classmates and the Law School audience on the "trials and tribulations of attending law school."

Following his riotous commentary, Law School Alumni Association President Larry Crispo '61 and Chairperson of the Alumni Awards Committee Patricia Lobello '67, presented the Alumni Service Awards to two outstanding graduates, Kenneth J. Collins and Belinda Stith, both presidents of the Student Bar Association, day and evening divisions respectively.

Alumni dance to the sounds of the Miriam Cutler Band at the first annual Alumni Picnic/Barbeque.

Alumni Shake and Bake

The Alumni Association Annual Event Planning Committee set aside black tie and evening gown tradition this year and opted for an informal and relaxed atmosphere at their first annual Alumni Picnic and Barbeque.

The Saturday afternoon event on the Loyola Marymount Campus in May, drew a crowd of 125 Law School alumni and guests dressed in shorts and t-shirts, who not only had the opportunity to shake-a-leg on the dance floor but also to show their prowess on the athletic field by participating in softball, volleyball and an old-fashioned egg toss.

Perhaps the biggest difference between the atmosphere of this year's picnic compared to the atmosphere of past years' dinner-dances was the cut in cost from the more formal affair. The lower ticket price made it possible for alumni to bring their children and invite other friends to enjoy the get-together.

The Annual Event Committee, headed by Claire Van Dam '73, is now looking toward a more diversified calendar for alumni — one which will include both types of events — the outdoor festive atmosphere of a picnic in the spring and the formal tradition of the dinner-dance in the fall. More information will follow in future editions of the Lawyer.

ALUMNI JOIN(D)ERS

Class of '51derful Reunites

Thirty years rolled back in time for the Class of 1951 on June 5, when 60 alumni and their guests warmly greeted each other at the Bel Air Country Club.

Cocktails, dining, and dancing set the mood which was obviously well-planned by the reunion chairperson, Michael Clemens. Class members anxiously took the microphone and entertained each other with favorite stories from their Law School days.

Welcoming the alumni and their guests was Dean Theo. A. Bruinsma, who presented a brief update on the Law School Development Program and a fresh perspective on the new campus and future building plans.

Several alumni traveled great distances to be reunited with their classmates. Five years ago when the Class of '51 held their 25th Reunion, Brian Kennedy arrived at David Kwan's Restaurant for the event a day late. This year he made it on time.

Other travelers included Gordon Granger who made it in from Houston, Texas and Martin Stone, hailing from Weston, Massachusetts.

Those unable to attend sent greetings through others and messages which were relayed by Michael Clemens and Judge Manuel Real. Jim Barrett sent vintage wine to be enjoyed by alumni while dining and his assurances that he would be there in "spirit."

Impromptu Reunion of LLS '66

An almost impromptu, but highly successful reunion of the 1966 night Law School class took place on June 4.

John Donnelly and Maurie Benson thought the 15th anniversary of their graduation should be celebrated, but in typical dilatory lawyer fashion, didn't get around to notifying anyone until less than a week before the get-together and by that time all that could be planned was a drop-in at Casey's Bar in downtown Los Angeles.

Never-the-less, 12 members of the class appeared for a convivial evening. Attending were bankruptcy Judge Richard Mednick, who had a previous commitment but showed up to share a quick round with his fellows. Ken Nelson, county counsel for Santa Barbara with his wife Mieke, were the farthest traveling attendees.

Everett Barber took time out from labor negotiations to attend. Luc Benoit, Dave Chodos, Roger Frommer, Irwin Groner, Richard McCann, Tim Orr and Art Wilcof either had nothing better to do or made time in their busy schedules to participate in the event.

Not attending but wiring his congratulations was Dave Monahan, from San Diego.

TOGETHER AGAIN — The class of 1951 enjoy an elegant 30-year reunion at the Bel Air Country Club in June.

Advocates Meet All Goals and Then Some

The Law School's normal operating expenditures and yearly inflationary rate were met head-on this year by an aggressive and successful Advocates team who not only met their $120,000 goal but forged beyond and raised $16,000 more than anticipated.

"Exceeding the goal represents more than a 30 percent increase over last year," said an elated Roman M. Silberfeld '74, co-chairman of the Advocates.

Adding to that, Brian K. Brandmeyer '62, co-chairman for the campaign said, "This year's campaign has surpassed all past annual fundraising campaigns in the School's history."

The grand total of $136,255, which was raised through more than 600 gifts, will be used to offset the daily operational costs of the Law School. A complete report on the 1980-81 Advocates campaign will be published in the next issue of the Loyola Lawyer, along with a list of donors to the Law School for the year.
