Library on the bluff

September 2017 (Volume 8.1)

The Fifth Law of Library Science

As we welcome new students to campus and help acclimate them to the rigours of academic research, we have the opportunity to reflect upon our own practices as professional librarians and library staff.

Over the next year, the William H. Hannon Library will undertake a number of assessment projects, including a detailed analysis of how students use and understand library spaces; a full review of library signage and wayfinding tools; a deep dive into refining the library's role in supporting digital scholarship; an examination of our e-collections through the lens of diversity; and a survey of the extent to which library programs and events foster learning and transformation.

Each month, the Happenings @ Hannon will bring you updates on current projects and upcoming events at the William H. Hannon Library. We look forward to discovering new perspectives on our work as academic librarians and library staff and sharing what we learn, dear reader, with you.

Get Help from LMU Librarians

Our primary goal here at the William H. Hannon Library is to assist students with their research by connecting them with reliable information resources. Quite often, that requires having an in-depth conversation with a student about their specific research needs. Learn about all the ways LMU students can connect with a librarian!
