Resist: Library Resources for Organizing and Activism

Many of our students have been inspired by the political marches happening across the United States these past few months. Librarian Aisha Conner-Gaten has pulled together useful resources for those who want to continue (or begin organizing) their activism. This month's "Explore Staff Picks" collection (level 1 beside the Circulation Desk) provides resources pulled together from across our collections. Along with a handy infographic (Activism and Organizing 101), this exhibit includes books and databases (Women and Social Movements in Modern Empires, Archives of Sexuality and Gender, etc.) that provide information about activism and even a few local organizations that are looking for activists like you.

New Items in Special Collections

Every year, we add to our growing collection of unique and rare materials in Archives and Special Collections. Recently, we acquired a 1613 edition of the Tractatus anatomicus triplex (shown here). Its author, Hieronymus Fabricius ab Aquapendente, was perhaps the most famous anatomist of the end of the sixteenth century.

Women's Voices 2018

Over one hundred students, faculty, staff, and guests came out for the 2018 edition of our annual Women's Voices event, "Spiritual Bodies: Women of Color on Religion, Race, and Gender." LMU students Rituja Kashid, Natasha Aquino, and Jessica Dickerson performed narratives from Leila Ahmed, Rita Brock, Monica Coleman, Zenu Earthlyn Manuel, and Jan Willis.
