WILLIAM H. HANNON LIBRARY | LOYOLA MARYMOUNT UNIVERSITY

February 2018 (Volume 8.6)

Library Student Workers: Where Are They Now?

The William H. Hannon Library employs over 100 students each year to maintain operations and keep the library open 24 hours a day, five days a week, plus weekend hours. Without the dedication and hard work of our student employees, we simply couldn't provide the level of attention and service that the campus community has come to expect from us. So we thought we would check in on two of our student employees who have graduated from Loyola Marymount University. We asked them about their time here at LMU, what they're doing now, and how working at the library contributed to their success.

Student Art on Display

This year's Spring Archives and Special Collections exhibition couldn't be contained within the walls of the Terrance L. Mahan, S.J. gallery. "Meeting Christ in Faith and Art" includes both works from our collections as well as works by current and former LMU students, like the one seen here, "Through My Eyes" by Mia Carrera.
