POCinLIS Conference Preview
On July 13, the William H. Hannon Library will host the inaugural People of Color in Library & Information Science (POCinLIS) Summit. The mission of the POCinLIS Summit is to create a productive and brave space for people of color, especially women and marginalized identities, working in the information sector. LMU librarians Nataly Blas, Aisha Conner-Gaten, Rachel Derse, and Jessea Young have been working together for the past year to build this event at LMU. READ MORE

Our Librarians’ Summer Plans
The librarians at the William H. Hannon Library are hard at work preparing for the upcoming semester, conducting research, and presenting about their projects at academic conferences around the world. We checked in with three of our librarians to ask about their summer plans. READ MORE

Baroque-Style Miniature Theatre
There is a miniature theatre currently on display beneath our central stairwell at the library. Created by David Garden and José García-Moreno, this Baroque era theater model was constructed as a scale set piece for a stop motion animated film that premiered during the finale of the play, “The Emperor of the Moon.” READ MORE

New Electronic Resources
We have just added two new e-resources to our online collections. Independent World Cinema provides streaming access to 400 classic and contemporary films. South Asia Archive gives researchers access to primary source documents related to colonial and early post-colonial periods of India. READ MORE

Summer Exhibitions
We recently hosted an opening reception for our student-curated summer exhibition, “From Their Perspective VI: American Popular Music in the Age of Ragtime and Jazz.” Student curators America Negrete and Cynthia Garcia shared their experiences selecting and evaluating materials from our Clara Jane Nixon Sheet Music Collection.
