CONGRATULATIONS CLASS OF '96

WORDS FROM THE UNWISE
DAVID PAUL BLEISTEIN '96

Rejoice! You're graduating.

You have a lot to rejoice about. You're entering one of the biggest markets for legal skills in the world. Everyone loves to complain about L.A.'s economy, but we're the envy of much of the rest of the U.S. People are running off with the mailman—figure out on the first day of CYA camp. Sol stayed out of DAVID PAUL BLEISTEIN '96 dating.

"Freedom of expression is the matrix, the indispensable condition, of nearly every other form of freedom."

You're entering the realities of your park I lived in during high tutoring the young singers in legal skills in the world. Every working day. When a client's estranged husband is beating up her brother, another client's estranged wife has run off with the mailman—and the joint bank account—you're reminded how ridiculous and academic all the rules sometimes are. What's interesting about working in most private practice situations is that you get to see how often the law is irrelevant. You've dealt with many cases where the clients had good arguments, but where their payoff was too small to make it worth the bother. Once in a great while, you have someone who cares less about the money than about justice. Clients like that are rare, but they enrich us by setting a framework for institutionalizing what's right for the rest of us.

I've learned a lot from my job in a small law firm. I've re-learned my old work ethic. I've learned how to do pleadings fast, and research faster; I've learned how to do a lot of different stuff at once that I had a rich baritone and the taste of gunmetal on my face.

BAR/BRI TAKES ON WEST/BARPASSERS CHALLENGE

 Recently West/Barpassers has published numerous flyers challenging the BAR/BRI passage rates by stating that you should only trust a passage rate that has been independently verified by an accounting firm. BAR/BRI did just that with the Summer '95 passage rates and the results are in!! Now the question is where are Barpassers' results from the Summer '95 bar exam???

If you find yourself in a situation where you hate the people you work for, plan to leave. But, plan then leave. You're probably working better if you're flying high, than if you're on the verge of crashing.

If you aren't working, INTERVIEW. OCI is a waste of time for most of us; it's really a cattle-call disguised as interviewing. Most LLB grads don't get positions that way; they find them on their own. They hunt them down the way Indiana Jones found the Lost Ark; by patience, perseverance, chasing the odd long-shot, and a general refusal to sell themselves short.

Even if your grades are lousy, you can still get a job in law school. Make yourself do it. Do a resume, and aim where your strengths are. Everyone here has strengths somewhere. Tell employers about them. Keep your hair neat, your interview suit clean, and [where appropriate] your beard or mustache trimmed. Then, just interview.

If you must, at first, interview for the sake of interviewing; you'll get used to the process. Then you'll be able to adopt that confident but not cocky attitude that'll get you a job.

DO NON-ACADEMIC THINGS. Lawyers do lots of stuff; they schmooze, lobby, persuade, dissuade, scream, whisper, make deals, run for office. They hunt them down. They find them on about your academic record. They wear, and I wondered if that's what happens to teachers who retire. Then came smiles and hugs and various exclamations on the diminutive nature of the world. It turned out Trerise had started the plant and landscape company and had the contract to service the plants at the law firm.

Trerise and I spent some time catching up and he promised not to tell the partners about my car-thefting, ass-kicking, hole-chasing past. And then I realized that his appearance symbolized an Aristotelian unity, that his re-emergence may have been coincidence, but a coincidence thick with meaning and messages about the rightness of path and perseverance.

I realized that there is no such thing as a self-made man (or woman). If someone tells you, "I did it all myself; no one helped me get where I am," turn away. You are dealing with a person who is ungratefully blind or demented. Grendel has followed a path from the slaughter and tedium. On this path, Grendel found love, a future, and a modicum of peace. The trail is littered with the corpses of demons and the unfortunate, but still standing are all those people who kicked his ass, encouraged him, befriended him, loved him, and supported him. He thanks you; he lifts a clawed hand to the ashen sky and waves farewell.

I'mmeu~ joy one feels when squeezing out the snail end of that narrow tunnel called self-improvement. So I was sitting there and I hear this vaguely familiar voice.

"Is this Robert Comer on the nameplate the same Robert Comer who used to sing in my high school choir?"

My stomach constricted with the time-warp G- forces of seeing Gene Trerise standing in the doorway of my office. He was wearing one of the teal t-shirts all the guys who cared for our office plants wore, and I wondered if that's what happens to teachers who retire. Then came smiles and hugs and various exclamations on the diminutive nature of the world. It turned out Trerise had started the plant and landscape company and had the contract to service the plants at the law firm.

Trerise and I spent some time catching up and he promised not to tell the partners about my car-thefting, ass-kicking, hole-chasing past. And then I realized that his appearance symbolized an Aristotelian unity, that his re-emergence may have been coincidence, but a coincidence thick with meaning and messages about the rightness of path and perseverance.

I realized that there is no such thing as a self-made man (or woman). If someone tells you, "I did it all myself; no one helped me get where I am," turn away. You are dealing with a person who is ungratefully blind or demented. I have never met a self-made man (or woman) ... If someone tells you, "I did it all myself; no one helped me get where I am," turn away. You are dealing with a person who is ungratefully blind or demented.

Take Time Off. Recharging your batteries as a human being will enhance your academic performance. Happy people almost always perform better. And who knows, you may bump into your next employer on the ski slopes.

See care. Goodbye, and take care.

"GRENDEL" from 1

We're going, some grandly, some subly. Anyone with an ounce of soul acknowledges this. Whether it's Gene Trerise or the D.C. fruit vendor two Summers ago who fronted me a couple of bananas each morning when I was hungry and too poor to buy, this Grendel-esque former felon is grateful. I want to go on record as admitting that I didn't get here by myself.

Now, sixteen years after I took that fateful deal, I have just finished my last regular class session in law school and, if I pay my library fines, I will graduate. Mom made it back into the world long ago by joining the Defense Department, becoming an unlikely cog in the top secret wheels of national defense. She even graduated from college, earning her Bachelors from the University of Arizona when she was sixty-five years old.

Grendel still thrives in my soul, and occasionally rears his fanged head when confronted or provoked, but Grendel has followed a path away from the slaughter and tedium. On this path, Grendel found love, a future, and a modicum of peace. The trail is littered with the corpses of demons and the unfortunate, but still standing are all those people who kicked his ass, encouraged him, befriended him, loved him, and supported him. He thanks you; he lifts a clawed hand to the ashen sky and waves farewell.
