

Digital Commons@
Loyola Marymount University
LMU Loyola Law School

Journal of Catholic Education

Volume 2 | Issue 2

Article 6

12-1-1998

Introduction

Gerald M. Cattaro
Fordham University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.lmu.edu/ce>

Recommended Citation

Cattaro, G. M. (1998). Introduction. Journal of Catholic Education, 2 (2). <http://dx.doi.org/10.15365/joce.0202062013>

This Focus Section Article is brought to you for free with open access by the School of Education at Digital Commons at Loyola Marymount University and Loyola Law School. It has been accepted for publication in Journal of Catholic Education by the journal's editorial board and has been published on the web by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons at Loyola Marymount University and Loyola Law School. For more information about Digital Commons, please contact digitalcommons@lmu.edu. To contact the editorial board of Journal of Catholic Education, please email JCE@nd.edu.

FOCUS SECTION

INTRODUCTION

GERALD M. CATTARO

Fordham University

The Lord loves the stranger. (Dt 10:18)

We are at the beginning of an inculturation process for Catholic schools in which diversity includes not only the face and culture of those we serve, but also their religious beliefs. Interreligious dialogue, therefore, enters into any conversation on diversity.

The cultures to which we belong are constantly in flux. Americans come in all sizes and shapes, urban and rural poor, and male and female wealthy. We no longer can define ourselves as belonging to one culture, for if we map ourselves we will realize that we share membership in a variety of cultures.

In this issue of Catholic Education, we present a concept of diversity which sharpens the awareness of external multicultural differences and incorporates a religious dimension which expresses the Catholic identity about which we so often speak. In order to deviate from the norm of such publications on multiculturalism, the articles center around a case study of what was done in the past, what can be done in the future to foster leadership, what is common practice, and what expands the notion of diversity to include interreligious dialogue.

As Catholics rooted in justice and ethics, we are propelled to incorporate the following concepts into our schools' mission: To serve a diverse population; to encourage leadership among minorities; and to promote interreligious dialogue. The success of Catholic education relies on its ability to promote respect for the rights of cultures, diversity, and the universal bonds of humanity.

Only when we promote a transcendent vision, transforming ourselves and inspiring our students, faculty, and parents to respond to social transformation, can the Catholic school community accept that the "stranger" is Jesus.

Gerald M. Cattaro is director of the Center for Non-Public Education and associate professor in the Graduate School of Education at Fordham University.

Copyright of Catholic Education: A Journal of Inquiry & Practice is the property of Catholic Education: A Journal of Inquiry & Practice and its content may not be copied or emailed to multiple sites or posted to a listserv without the copyright holder's express written permission. However, users may print, download, or email articles for individual use.