Building Program — Phase III
Library and Moot Court Renovation Begins

The metamorphosis of Loyola Law School is nearing its final stage. Phase III is being placed on the "fast track" and the estimated $2 million project is anticipated to be completed in early 1985. Phase III is concerned with the renovation of the 9th Street Building, which opened in 1964.

Impetus for this project was a generous gift by Mrs. Liliane G. Rains in honor of her late husband, William M. Rains a Loyola Law School graduate from the Class of 1926. As a sincere gesture of appreciation the Law School and Loyola Marymount University's Trustees have named the building the William M. Rains Library.

The goals of Phase III are to accommodate the library’s more than 290,000 bound or microfilm volumes, provide expanded and state of the art study areas for students and give the library staff ample space to perform its functions. Additionally, the Moot Court will be remodeled so that it can function both as the court and convert to an 80 seat classroom.

Other improvements will include the replacement of offices to accommodate new full time faculty members, whose ranks have grown, as a student/faculty ratio requirement for American Bar Association Accreditation.

Finally, major improvements of the existing air conditioning system are also planned. Please turn to Page 6.

The Spring is always a time for preparation for a change in the academic world. Students are gearing up for exams, seniors are preparing for graduation and bar examinations and the faculty is contemplating new programs and changes for the following year. Two of our distinguished faculty members will be retiring this year. Gerry Rosen and Martha Robinson have played such important roles in the evolution of the law school. They will be missed. There will be great detail concerning their retirement and future plans in the next issue of the Lawyer. Carol Agate and Gary Wienerman will also be leaving Loyola, after several years of loyal service.

Several new faculty will be joining us next year. Let me tell you a little about them. Don Brosnan, a graduate of the University of California School of Law, has had significant experience in the tax and bankruptcy fields. He is currently a senior partner at the firm of Nossaman, Krueger & Flagler. Victor Gold, who will be a visiting professor of law for 1984-85, is presently a full professor at Arizona State University School of Law where he has developed an enviable reputation as a teacher and an active scholar in the area of landlord-tenant law. He is currently the editor of the UCLA Law Review and an associate with the Los Angeles firm of Nassman, Krueger & Marsh. Victor will specialize in commercial law, legal writing and related courses.

Karl Michael Manheim taught at Loyola Law School from 1975 to 1979. During that time, he developed an enviable reputation as a first rate scholar and teacher. After several years with the City Attorney's Office in Santa Monica where he helped break new ground on several significant legal areas, Karl will be returning to full time teaching.

In addition to these new faculty members, Professors Louis Natali and Bernard Almaraz, who have already made significant contributions to our academic pursuits, will be joining the faculty next year. Don Brosnan, a serious and dedicated scholar, will be a full tenure professor this summer. Lary is currently concluding work on a major treatise with William D. Hawkland, Chancellor of Louisiana State University, who has been influential in the development of the Uniform Commercial Code. Professor Lawrence brings to Loyola one of America's outstanding teachers and scholars in the field of commercial law and will greatly strengthen our already strong program in that field.

In addition to these new faculty members, Professors Louis Natali and Dan Lazaroff, who have already made significant contributions to the academic program in several areas, will become permanent tenured members of the faculty, and Visiting Professor Edward McGynn Gaffney, the James P. Bradley Constitutional Law Chairholder, will join us on a long-term basis.

The quality of the faculty is perhaps the most significant feature in the excellence of the school's educational program. The additions to the faculty represented by these gifted teachers and scholars will help ensure the high level of excellence in teaching, which has been the hallmark of Loyola for years, will be maintained.

CAROL AGATE, clinical professor, spoke on sex discrimination by private clubs at a meeting of the Women's Law Faculty Research Seminar in Gender Studies. . . J. SCOTT BOVITZ '80, administrative assistant and editorial chairman of the Faculty Board on Bankruptcy Rules for the Federal Bar Association & Judges of California, will be appearing on a panel sponsored by the Southern California Chapter of the American Bar Association at the Annual Air Pollution Forum. . . MARY-LYNNNE FISHER, acting professor of law, will speak on the legal rights of patients with disabilities at a workshop sponsored by Pasadena Awareness and Community Effort with the disabled. — on April 7. . . Visiting Professor EDWARD M. GAFFNEY, JR. , an assistant professor in residence, represented Regis College, a Jesuit institution in Denver, that recently won a trial sustaining the permissibility of state and federal assistance to students attending the college. The plaintiffs, the American Indians United, a group of church and State, were unsuccessful in their argument that this program violates the Establishment Clause and the Equal Protection Clause. . . Professor CURT GARBESI will be teaching a seminar on the impact of International Business Transactions in the U.S. on the day of a seminar sponsored by the Loyola Law School's International Bar Association and the Los Angeles County Bar Association. . . When the final rounds of the Scott Moot Court Honors Competition open April 12, it will be a continuation of Loyola's commitment to excellence in appellate advocacy, as well as an annual tribute to one of this state's greatest legal and civic leaders, Joseph Scott, second dean of the law school.

The 6 second year students who will argue this year were BBA defendants in the current appellate suit, currently on appeal in the California California courts, join a select group of Loyola alum who have earned the honor of participating in the Scott Moot Court Program. This looks at the Scott competition. Among the most prestigious activities at Loyola Law School — a glimpse of the man it honors, and a review of the present and future of this event.

From England to Los Angeles
Joseph Scott was the son of uneducated parents who believed strongly in learning. This belief was instilled firmly in their son, born in Peneth, England in 1867, and it became a guiding force throughout his life. Scott attended Ushaw College and London University before immigrating to New York City in 1890 at the age of 22. His was not a smooth transition from one continent to the other...for five months, destitute and unable to find work, he took a job as a book carrier. While working as a bricklayer's assistant, he heard of a teaching position for which he might be qualified and submitted his application. St. Bonaventure College in Allegany, N.Y., hired him the following year as a professor of rhetoric and literature, and he resumed his educational journey, a circuit he followed throughout his life.

Scott moved to California in 1883, when it was still possible to practice law without a formal degree. He became a student in the office of Judge J.S. Anderson and in 1884, at the age of 27, was admitted to the State Bar of California.

As a Californian, Scott was generous with his time and his talents. Among the many civic activities in which he participated was the 1912 drafting of the Los Angeles city charter. 15 years on the Board of Education, and 11 years with the Chamber of Commerce, serving as its president.

His educational contributions to law grew along with his involvement with the city and county. He became second dean of Loyola in 1929, remaining in that position until 1934. Additionally, he received honorary degrees from Georgetown, Santa Clara and Notre Dame Universities.

Often encouraged to go into politics, Scott declined those suggestions, choosing instead to work behind the scenes. In 1928, he nominated Herbert Hoover as president of the United States at the National Convention.

Known for his dramatic and effective courtroom presence, Scott's greatest fame came as a trial attorney. Among his clients were many national figures including evangelist Aimee McPherson and Joan Berry, who sued Charlie Chaplin in a paternity suit that gained worldwide attention.

When Scott died in 1958, it was

The Scott Moot Court Honors Program is a student-administered competition. This year, with the guidance of faculty advisor Professor Lionel Sobel and the assistance of Professor Gideon Kanner, the following third-year students developed the problem and guided students through the competition:

Phyllis A. Meadows, Chief Justice Karen Lee Freelden, Thomas Ong, Scott Maclachlach - Associate Justices Carol Saborn - Chief Justice - Designate Susan Gentile - Associate Justice - Designate

In addition, the Honors Board competitors, who represented Loyola in competitions nationwide, and assisted students in polishing oral skills through practice rounds prior to the competition are:

Greg Bray, David Coda-Wagner, Amy Friedman - national team, Jim Moore, Susan Tannenbaum, Kurt Weismuller - state team Josuadario, Anne Yeager - opposing team

A necessary element of a successful competition is input from the faculty advisors who work with the individual competitors as they move through the program. This year, the Program was fortunate to have the assistance of Professors Carol Agate, Charlotte Goldberg, Allan Ides, Susan Liebeler, Quentin Ogren, Dan Schechter, Joseph Siskovich, Grace Tomlin, Donald Wilson, Michael Wolfsion, and Kenneth Vogel. Dean Arthur Frakt also served as a faculty advisor.

and oral advocacy, and the man the students sought to emulate was Joseph Scott, the program's namesake.

In the 30-plus years since its inception, the Competition has produced an elite group of talented advocates, most of whom had their first taste of "real" courtroom life as student competitors. Some of those alumni who were involved include: Joseph M. McLaughlin, '55; Ernest Long, '55; William Tucker, '56; John Brink, '57; Ronald Bevis, '57; James McCarthy, '61; Vincent Therpe, '59; and Thomas Garcia, '52.

Many other alumni participated, of course, but this sampling indicates the type of attorney the Scott Competition helps produce.

Past Meets Present
When Otto Kaus, this year's Scott Moot Court President greets his associate justices, Clarke Stephens, Associate Justice for the California Court of Appeal, and Shirley Hustad, partner in Hustad, Miller, Carlson & Beardsley, it will be a reunion for the two. They sat together on the California Court of Appeal several years ago, and the Scott Moot Court session marks their first opportunity to re-create that panel.

Moreover, Justice Kaus, a Loyola graduate, '49, was also faculty advisor to the Competition when he was a Loyola Law professor. He is currently Associate Justice of the California Supreme Court.

Anatomy of a Competition
For the 6 finalists, the Scott Moot Court session is a rare opportunity to see and feel a "real" Court of Appeal at work. Their journey to win a spot in the finals was one that commenced last fall when they were among more than 100 day and evening students that began Introductory to Appellate Advocacy, with Professor Lionel Sobel, faculty advisor to the Scott Moot Court Honors Competition, a student-run program that focuses on the development of individual appellate advocacy skills. Thirty-seven students successfully submitted briefs on an actual case on appeal in the California Courts — Galloway v. CBS, a defamation suit that questions the standard for private figure plaintiffs in defamation suits in this state. A survey and application of law since the New York Times, Rosenbloom and Gertz Supreme Court cases, as well as an analysis of existing California statutory law, were necessary.

After brief submission, the student advocates began oral rounds to select the finalists who would vie for positions on the Scott Moot Court Honors Board, the third year student group that competes nationwide and administers the program. Former Scott members, attorneys and judges were invited to join as judges in 2 rounds that selected first 12, then 6 students who would go on to the finals. The top 10 advocates were positions on the Honors Board, with the 6 continuing to the finals to determine state and national teams, as well as to select the best oralist.

Two other students, who had ranked at the top of the first semester class, were invited to join the 1984 Board based on their grades and assisted in administering the program.

Honor
On April 12, in the midst of a champagne reception, the top students will be announced and honored. However, all participants, the 1984 Honors Board and the competitors, will be recognized for contributing to the program, and enhancing a long-standing tradition and cherished honor at Loyola — the right to work alongside themselves with Joseph Scott as attorneys who are committed to excellence in appellate advocacy.

More than 250 jammed the Third Annual Institute for Corporate Counsel held March 15 - 16 at the Sheraton Grande Hotel. Among the subjects discussed were toxic torts, wrongful discharge, and protecting trade secrets.

The speakers for the two-day program included some of the best legal minds in the nation, according to Chair Robert C. Lobdell. "Wherever the best person was, anywhere in the country, we went to get him or her," he said. Among the experts who made presentations were William Baxter, former Assistant Attorney General, Anti-Trust Division, Justice Department; Terry Calvani, Commissioner, Federal Trade Commission; and Donato Evangelista, the vice president of IBM who has been in charge of the litigation process against Japanese manufacturers. Victor Palmini, the corporate rescue specialist and currently president and chief executive officer of Baldwin-United, spoke at the Thursday luncheon. Also, appearing on the program were Loyola faculty members Robert H. Sulnick and Daniel E. Lazzroff.

The Institute for Corporate Counsel is jointly sponsored by the Los Angeles County Bar Association and Loyola Law School. Plans for next year's Institute are being prepared and will be announced in late April.

A Law Day Red Mass will be held Tuesday, May 1 at 3:05 p.m. in St. Basil's Church, located in the Wilshire District. Cardinal Manning will celebrate the mass.

Roger M. Sullivan, '50 chairman of the sponsoring committee, cordially invites all Loyola alumni to attend.

The "Into the 80's" building program was initiated in 1977 under Dean Fred Lower '64. It was commenced to answer the growing needs of students and faculty and for financial and critical path planning considerations the program was divided into 3 phases.

Dedication in 1981 of the $4.6 million Fritz B. Burns Academic Center completed Phase I. This 4 story, 150,000 square foot center, the centerpiece of the campus has 6 classrooms, faculty and all administrative offices, a student lounge, staff lounge, bookstore and dining area. It also houses the semi-annual Loyola Law School art shows.

Nearing completion now is Phase II which includes construction of 3 freestanding classrooms, (now in use), and a chapel, almost finished, plus handsome landscaping. This activates architect Frank Gehry's academic village concept in an urban setting and provides a sense of community.

Preliminary drawings for Phase III have been submitted to the faculty building committee for evaluation, comments and approval. After a recommendation is forwarded the university's trustees for their similar process, selection of a contractor and beginning of work follows.
